

NAZI ESCAPE ROUTE TO PARIS SEVERED; ALLIES HURL ENEMY INTO FULL RETREAT

TEXAS VS. EUROPE

Proud Battle Queen Slugs Into Teeth Of Bristling Forts

By FIRST LT. WELDON JAMES, U. S. M. C.

ABOARD THE USS TEXAS, OFF CHERBOURG—(Delayed) In a three-hour duel with powerful German coastal batteries today this proud old queen of the older fleet sustained two direct hits, innumerable damaging near misses, and had to fight two fires spreading on the main deck.

But she fought back, like an Amazon. Three times she roared back through shell burst alley, swerving, twisting, turning, in a maze of exploding geysers, with her 14-inch guns blasting a death-train of half-ton projectiles at the enemy forts.

Midway of her second run-past, German gunners scored the perfect hit. A nine or 11-inch shell hit dead on top of the conning tower, blew up with terrific noise into the navigation bridge eight feet directly above, mortally wounded the helmsman, seriously wounding four others, and wrecking a third of the bridge and some of its controls.

Carries On Fight From Conning Tower

Before the choking clouds of yellow-brown smoke had cleared away, Captain Charles A. Baker, U. S. N., 50, of Washington, D. C., commanding officer, miraculously unhurt, had completed his order: "Clear the bridge... All hands below..." carried on, then, from the conning tower.

Flame from our own belching guns ignited gun covers and gun locker gear on the fantail. The blast broke open ammunition boxes, scattered 40-millimeter shells over the hot deck. Forty-five caliber bullets, sprung by concussion from the magazine of an officer's revolver, began exploding in the midst of the rolling, half-burned shells.

Marine crews dashed in to throw the dangerously warming ammunition overboard, while sailors helped extinguish the flames. Marine Capt. A. A. Bernard, 26, of Norwich, Conn., directing the Leathernecks, had to pull his men back, send them in again between salvoes—our 14-inch guns blasting just over their heads would kill them. But they got the ammunition overboard, and the sailors extinguished the fire.

German shells continued to roar over, or to fall just short of us, hurling shell fragments and mountains of water over the decks.

Armor-Piercing Shell Lands in Cabin

Another struck—a 240-millimeter armor-piercing shell that blasted through the port bow—fell without exploding into the empty cabin of M. A. Clark, ship's clerk, U. S. N., 38, of Alachua, Fla., and lay there, a bouncing threat each time our mighty salvos rocked the ship.

The shell disposal officer, Lt. James D. Ford, U. S. N., 26, of New York city, moved in with his crew, hoisted it with mattresses, and decided to nurse it along back to a British port. In the midst of the torment, an admiring destroyer ahead flashed back the battle-cry famous since the last war: "Come on, Texas!"

At the end the appreciative commodore of the minesweeper flotilla signalled thanks "for staying in there with us and taking all the slugging—otherwise several of us would certainly have been sunk."

And the Army, from the coast, noting that several of the enemy fortresses had been silenced, signalled its thanks to the entire fleet for a sorely-needed job "well done."

That fleet included the American battleships Nevada and Arkansas, the cruisers Tuscaloosa and Quincy, the British cruisers Glasgow and Enterprise, an Anglo-American destroyer flotilla, and the minesweepers.

Destroyer Sustains Direct Hit

One of our destroyers, the USS O'Brien, sustained a direct hit in this action, with 10 of her company killed and 12 wounded. Another destroyer, the USS Barton, escaped with insignificant damage.

The fleet commander was Rear Adm. Morton L. Deyo, U. S. N., 57, of Kitterby Point, Me., aboard the Tuscaloosa. His first bombardment force, headed by the Nevada, checked the German fortifications on the western line of the Cherbourg peninsula. His second, commanded by Rear Adm. Carleton F. Bryant, U. S. N., 52, also of Searport, Me., aboard his flagship Texas, engaged those on the eastern line.

It was an engagement of a type rare in the history of the U. S. Navy, unthinkable save for the magic of modern naval gunnery or the Army's desperate need. The German fortresses were bristling with six, nine and 11-inch guns. The area was heavily mined. There was no element of surprise; the Germans had long expected the fleet, and it came, in broad noonday daylight, searching for its targets along a coast obscured by haze and smoke.

We were well within German range long before 12 o'clock. The Germans held their fire. With the Texas leading, we moved in closer, narrowing the distance to 14,000 yards. The Arkansas opened up first, but our pine spitter, hovering over the dense haze and battle-smoke of the coast, had difficulty locating our then nonfiring targets. Our shore fire control party, inland, had the same haze-obscured vision as we.

The booming guns of the Arkansas were our chief interest at one moment.

The next moment there were geysers in the sea 400 yards ahead, straddling the nearest destroyer. Then the geysers were rising about us.

The battle was joined. Several long minutes later we had our

70,000 Germans Slain, Seized During Month by Baltic Army

Soviets Within 16 Miles Of Lomza Strongpoint

LONDON, Monday, Aug. 14.—(P)—Russian troops attacking with increased power yesterday drove to within 16 miles of the Nazi strong hold of Lomza in their broad flanking movement northeast of embattled Warsaw, and hurled the Germans across the Biebrza river, last big water obstacle before the German East Prussian border, 15 miles beyond.

MARK THIS!

REWARD FOR ADOLF

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—(P)—An ABSIE (American Broadcasting Station in Europe) broadcast picked up by NBC said today that posters signed "Carl Goerdler" and offering a reward of 10 marks for Hitler's head appeared on public buildings in Germany.

Dr. Goerdler, former mayor of Leipzig who is being sought in connection with the Hitler assassination plot, has a Gestapo-fixed price of 1,000,000 marks on his head.

A special Moscow announcement also disclosed that Gen. Andrei I. Yeremenko's Second Baltic army had killed or captured nearly 70,000 Germans in a month, boasting to more than 800,526 the number of enemy casualties suffered since the big summer offensive began June 23.

Yeremenko's troops, now almost half-way across Latvia in a drive toward the Baltic sea, yesterday captured the rail and highway center of Madona, 75 miles east of Riga, Latvian capital. Other units are within 55 miles of Riga on the southeast in the concerted Russian drive aimed at smashing 25 weakened Nazi divisions of possibly 200,000 men trapped in Estonia and Latvia.

North of Yeremenko's sector another powerful Soviet army, the Third Baltic, captured the rail and highway town of Vori, nearly 38 miles inside Estonia and 95 miles from the Gulf of Riga. Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's men apparently intend to seal off Estonia as part of the methodical chopping up of the trapped enemy divisions.

The rail city of Rouge, eight miles southwest of Vori, also was captured. Its fall put the Russians only 32 miles from Valga, junction of the Tallinn-Riga and Pskov-Riga railways. The line running through Valga is the backbone of Axis defenses in the two Baltic states.

Driving northward along the western shore of Lake Peipus the Russians also seized Sakdohi, 10 miles northwest of Pskov. On the front near the southeastern corner of east Prussia Gen. G. F. Zakharov's Second White Russian army virtually had cleared the enemy from a 25-mile section of the east bank of the Biebrza river in a drive toward east.

Terms Made Easier

For Small War Plants

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(P)—Any small firm whose war contract is terminated will be excused from making payments of interest and principal on loans from the Smaller War Plants Corporation until the government pays its termination claim, the SWPC announced tonight.

A reduction in the rate of interest on SWPC loans also was announced by SWPC Chairman Maury Maverick. The rate now required, 2 1/2 per cent, is the same as the rate to be paid to the contractor by the Army or Navy when a termination claim is settled.

Maverick said the action merely represented SWPC's adoption of the principles of the "V" and "VI" loans already in force and would give small business "the same advantages as big business."

4,000 Nazis, Chetniks

Beaten by Tito's Forces

LONDON, Aug. 13.—(P)—A column of 4,000 Germans and Serb Chetniks, trying to break through to Niksic from Trebinje Bilece, was beaten in a six-day battle and forced to flee after heavy losses, Marshal Tito of the Yugoslav Partisans reported in a communique today.

In another battle with Gen. Draja Mihailovic's Chetniks, 522 Serbs were killed, 500 wounded and 637 captured, the communique declared.

Callaway Farm Plan Is Urged For Nation

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(P)—A novel "corporation farming" plan, hailed by its backers as "the salvation of postwar agriculture," was submitted today to the nation's farm leaders.

The unusual proposal—calling for formation of small local corporations which would employ a farmer and buy land for him to operate—was brought forth by two Georgia congressmen, who said it already is at work in their state.

Sen. Russell and Rep. Ramspeck, Democrats, said they had forwarded the plan to the Senate and House Agriculture Committees, War Food Administrator Marvin Jones, Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard and others.

The plan, in brief, calls for seven stockholders to put up $1,000 each. With their capital they would spend about half their funds for land, the rest for improving it and getting a farm manager to start operation of the project.

Devised by Cason Callaway, wealthy retired Georgia textile executive who turned scientific farmer, the proposal is designed to: 1, improve soil; 2, permit long-term commercial credit; 3, use machinery to work crops; and 4, attract processing plants near the farms.

Hundreds of persons, overcome by smoke and heat or slightly injured by sparks and embers which showered from collapsing amusement structures, received first aid treatment from emergency squads of doctors and nurses who arrived

Is Forecast for Atlanta

Continued hot weather, with a probable maximum temperature of 93 degrees, is the weather forecast today for the Atlanta area, according to the weather bureau.

But scattered afternoon thunder showers may bring some relief from the heat.

The high temperature yesterday was 89 degrees at 3:30 p. m. and the low was 71 degrees at 5:30 a. m.

Allied Planes Rain Death As Argentan Falls to Americans

The enemy's last direct flight highway to menaced Paris was severed yesterday in a northward, curving sweep of Allied armored forces as Lt. Gen. Omar Bradley's American troops stormed into Argentan, German stronghold.

While swarms of Allied bombers showered destruction from the skies, the German Seventh Army was pictured in full retreat as the last Nazi escape hatch in the Normandy bulge was constricted to 18 miles by merciless blows. The Allies hurled thousands of bombers and fighters to claw and slash at masses of German materiel and troops in Normandy's "coffin corner." The air toll was fearful.

Aerial War

LONDON, Monday, Aug. 14.—(P)—In the biggest aerial day since D-Day, Allied air might inflicted terrible punishment yesterday on Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge's retreating Normandy army, blasting vehicles and troops and churning crowded roads and bridges all the way from the battlefront to Paris and the Seine.

Every type of aircraft, including more than 1,250 American heavy bombers, concentrated on the enemy's retreat route between Falaise and Argentan in an area bordered roughly by Lisieux and Rouen to the northeast, Laigle to the south, and eastward to Paris.

Flying Fortresses and Liberators bombed roads and road junctions on a large scale for the first time, as did RAF Lancasters and Halifaxes. The heavies attacked in threes and bombardiers picked their own targets.

MAULING ASSAULT—Marauders and Havocs of the Ninth Air Force, Mitchells, Bostons and Mosquitos of the Second Tactical Air Force, and fighter-bombers of the Eighth Air Force joined in the mauling assault, attacking everything that moved along the roads.

Returning crews told of terrific punishment meted out to German armor and troops rushing eastward to escape the Allied trap. Field reports related that the enemy was jamming the roads with as many as 80 vehicles to the mile, with everything headed eastward. These packed roads were targets for the Allied airmen, who left behind masses of wreckage.

From dawn until midnight there wasn't a moment when some formation wasn't in the sky. Marauders and Havocs late in the day bombed rail bridges at Cerisy, Peronne and Doullens and a fuel transfer point at Corviel, with a loss of two Marauders.

BLAST BORDEAUX OIL—After dark Lancasters, keeping up the incessant campaign against the enfeebled submarine menace, blasted oil storage depots at Bordeaux after having blasted submarine pens at Brest with 6-ton bombs in the second attack in two days.

Indicating Allied planes were over Germany early today the Berlin radio broadcast that "nuisance raiders" were flying toward the Brandenburg-Berlin area.

The Eighth's fighter-bombers had a field day, destroying or damaging 2,110 railway cars, 221 locomotives, 217 military trucks and 79 other vehicles in addition to plastering 23 freight yards, 4 bridges and three tunnels. They lost eight planes.

Twelve heavy bombers were lost during the day. Lending their full deadly weight to the effort to ram a cork into the bottle holding Nazi troops, the heavies in unprecedented operations smashed at roads and highway junctions in the areas of Bernay, Elbeuf, Rouen, B. u. Chy, Conches, Oulie, Damville, St. Leger, Meulan and Hernoiville in

Blaze Overcomes Hundreds; Costly Pier Fire Smoldering

CLIFFSIDE, N. J., Aug. 13.—(P)—The fourth major fire in three days in the New York City-New Jersey area swept through Palisades Amusement Park for two and a half hours today, driving out an estimated 25,000 Sunday pleasure seekers, sending at least 19 persons to hospitals and destroying about 85 per cent of the property before it was brought under control.

Firemen with apparatus from 14 municipalities battled the flames, which Irving Rosenthal, park proprietor, said had caused damages which "will probably exceed $1,500,000."

Hundreds of persons, overcome by smoke and heat or slightly injured by sparks and embers which showered from collapsing amusement structures, received first aid treatment from emergency squads of doctors and nurses who arrived from nearby communities in response to radio appeals by Cliffside and Fort Lee police.

Most of the 4,000 persons who had sought relief from the heat in the park's swimming pool, near the fire's point of origin, were milling about in swimming suits, anxious about their belongings, while others were looking for lost children.

Between 70 and 100 cars in the parking lot were destroyed. The sound of exploding gas tanks led many to believe there were bombs going off. The pavement itself erupted and cracked from the heat.

The fire, which came as a temperature of 100 degrees broke all New Jersey records for the fourth successive day, was the third major resort blaze in three days, coming after the burning of a block of boardwalk and buildings

Friday at Wildwood, N. J., and of part of Luna Park at New York City's Coney Island yesterday.

At Pier 4 in nearby Hoboken, a $4,300,000 fire which started Friday night was still smoldering and flaring up in a pier building and among creosote-coated piles, blacking out the sky over Hoboken with smoke. Police Chief Edward McFeeley, of Hoboken, announced today two men last seen fighting the flames Friday night were missing.

McFeeley said 126 additional persons, including firemen, longshoremen, coast guardsmen and Red Cross Canteen workers were treated for fire and smoke injuries at the pier today, bringing the total number close to 700.

Nimitz Visions Defeat of Japs Without Homeland Invasion

By The Associated Press.

Fresh aerial assaults against Japanese bases from the northern Kuriles to the southern Philippines and beyond were announced yesterday by Admiral Nimitz, who pressed the belief Japan can be brought to her knees without invasion of the Nippon mainland.

The Pacific fleet commander announced widespread raids against the Kuriles, Carolines, Marshalls and Marianas islands, and another attack on Chichi Jima Island in the Bonins, only 900 miles from Tokyo.

Gen. MacArthur reported a raid on shipping in Davao gulf near Mindanao in the Philippines sank a 3,000-ton freighter. Night bombers destroyed two Japanese merchantmen near Halmahera, big island between New Guinea and the Philippines.

Nimitz, anxious to move his headquarters to the Marianas, kept close to the push toward Japan, told newsmen at Pearl Harbor he felt the invasion of the Japanese homeland may not be necessary to win the war, but he added that its occupation would insure winning the peace.

Liberators bombed Paramushiro in the Kuriles on Thursday, sinking one Japanese patrol vessel and damaging another, and the next day other American planes bombed Pagan and Rota in the Marianas, Truk and Ponape in the Carolines and dropped 80 tons of bombs on remaining Marshall islands still in enemy hands. Not an American plane was lost.

Renewed attacks on the Bonins, following Wednesday's first full-scale bombing of the Volcano Islands, Truk and Ponape in the Carolines were giving increasing attention to the front door approach to the Japanese homeland.

Chinese troops appeared determined to recapture Hengyang, vital rail junction seized by the enemy last week. Heavy losses were reported for both sides in bitter fighting there.

Hengyang is on the Canton-Hankow railroad, both ends of which are in Japanese hands. The Nipponese are striving to close a 170-mile gap of track and thus bisect China from Manchuria to the South China sea.

Fourteenth AAF bombers attacked Hengyang targets, causing heavy damage, Gen. Stilwell's headquarters reported.

Linking of the Lede and Burma supply roads into Free China appeared a possible objective of Burmese and Chinese troops which took Kazi, 20 miles south of captured Myittha. They were headed toward the Burma road town of Lungling.

Allied troops moving east toward the Chindwin river in India came up against some Japanese resistance, but operations to clear enemy remnants from north-eastern Burma were described as progressing satisfactorily.

Bell Family Day Draws 100,000 to Big Plant

The Constitution's Marietta News Bureau

By DAVID SNELL

MARIETTA, Aug. 13.—An estimated 100,000 persons came today to the giant assembly plant of the Bell bomber plant and marveled at the countless miracles of the assembly line.

It was family day. The dads, mothers, sisters, brothers, wives, husbands, children, grandchildren and grandparents of the workers saw for the first time the B-29 Superfortress at close hand, and the interior of the building where the plane is made.

Young and old they came, and one and all were amazed at the gargantuan spectacle of the vast air-conditioned main assembly building, which no words can adequately describe.

Many were the enthusiastic appraisals of the Bell bomber plant. Miss Genevieve Rohrig, of Atlanta, a secretary in the production control department, brought her two brothers, Sgt. Albert Rohrig, and 14-year-old Henry Rohrig; her sister, Miss Vivian Rohrig, and her dad and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Rohrig.

"They're making a good plane, and it's a darn good lay-out here," said the sergeant, who is stationed at the Atlanta Air Base.

Little brother Henry summed his feelings up with a simple "I like it!"

Dad and mother were pretty nearly bursting with pride in their daughter and the work she is doing.

The Constitution contacted one old-timer—J. H. Jones, 88, of Marietta, who with his son had come to see what his grandson, J. C. Jones, of Marietta, was building.

The grandson is a foreman in fuselage assembly. "I think it's the biggest shop I've ever seen," said the oldster.

Mrs. Grace Ivey Hembry, of Acworth, a riveting instructor in the wing department, took her mother, Mrs. J. M. Craig, also of Acworth, along the roped corridors which paralleled the assembly line.

Said Mrs. Craig, "I think it's wonderful. It's mighty smart folks to get up such a job. I think they ought to stay on the job every day to help bring victory. I have a son, a daughter, a daughter-in-law, and a son-in-law that work here, and a son in the service. I hope they all help to get him back home!"

With Mrs. Atha Wilbanks, who works in production control, were her husband, C. A. Wilbanks, and her four-year-old son, Charles Barry Wilbanks.

"Tell the man how you liked it, Charles," said Dad.

"Fine!" said the child.

"But wasn't this the biggest airplane you have ever seen?" said Dad.

"Nope," Charles Barry Wilbanks replied.

When asked for his opinion of the plant where his wife works, Wilbanks said, "I'm deeply impressed with the magnitude of it, and also by the size of the planes."

There were many such comments—every person questioned was greatly impressed.

A comment heard not a few times by a plant official was from housewives, who bitterly upbraided their husbands for coming home after a day's work and complaining of being so tired.

"Here I work over a hot fire all day long, and you work in this big, air-conditioned building . . . I'd give anything to swap with you," several wives heard saying.

An unexpected feature of the day was the appearance of the P-63 Kingcobra, the great new Bell-made plane announced 10 days ago, which flew in from Buffalo, N. Y., on a routine test flight.

The plane flew to Marietta and then left for Buffalo, but was forced down by bad weather at Huntington, W. Va. The air route to the Niagara Falls airport, the plane's base, is approximately 710 miles.

This was the first southern appearance of the P-63, and was believed to be the first time that press representatives had seen it in action.

Bell officials disclosed that the plane was in the 400-mile-per-hour class, but would not say how much faster than that it would travel. When the plane buzzed the Marietta Army airfield all witnesses agreed that it was the fastest thing they had ever seen.

A company spokesman stated that the plane would show a marked improvement over previous fighter types in altitude, range, and rate of climb.

The Kingcobra circled the field, and dropped its auxiliary gasoline tanks into a nearby wooded patch.

The P-63 thrilled the observers as it swooped over the field like a bolt of lightning, and climbed perpendicularly to a height of several thousand feet.

The plane is armed with a 37-mm. cannon in its nose, and four .50-caliber machineguns—two in the nose, and one on each wing. Quantities of the planes are already being sent to Russia, the Bell spokesman stated.

EVERYBODY GAPPED—The kids were not the only ones who gaped at the sights inside the big plant as Family day, an open house for workers' families, drew crowds.

'We Are the Americans' Magic Word in France

By IRA WOLFERT.

Copyright, 1944, by The Atlanta Constitution. WITH THE FRENCH GUERRILLA FORCES INSIDE THE BREST PENINSULA, Aug. 11.—(Delayed)—Our own wild west in its most troubled days must have known such times as Brittany's villages are enduring now.

We settled for a night in one of these villages at the home of a family where there are four children and a typical domineering old "Bonne" with a misery in her back and grinding grinding various veins on her legs and the habit of mumbling acridly while giving rein to her genius over the stove.

Men with rifles stood guard on every street and back lane of the village. When darkness came they moved under the trees and into the shadows of buildings to keep from being throttled from behind.

In a nearby cafe, guerrillas sipped their ersatz pernod and pored over papers and photographs taken from Germans they had captured or killed during the day.

INTEREST IN PICTURES They were particularly interested in photographs of French women who had posed in compromising positions for and with German soldiers. It was very odd to see these men, most of whom carried a Luger pistol, a large Hitler Jugend knife in their belts, a German machine pistol slung over one shoulder and a German carbine, or Sten gun slung over the other shoulder, poring attentively over these rude photos but their interest apparently was professional.

They sought to identify these women, mark down their names on the backs of the photographs for future punishment. Nearly all Frenchmen of all classes seem to regard as the ultimate in crime the habit some of their women developed during the last four years—entertaining themselves with Nazis. Their hatred for them is greater even than the hatred for male collaborators. One Frenchman told me this was because when their women went over to the enemy they felt very alone in their war and very sure they had lost it.

HARSH TREATMENT In any case harsh treatment has been meted out to female "collaborators," including some cases of beatings by mobs, violently applied mudpucks and brutal haircuts, where a woman's crowning glory would be cropped skillfully into the shape of a swastika and this certainly is true that when millions of Frenchmen return home from prison camps in Germany they will learn immediately from their neighbors whether their wives or sweethearts had been unfaithful during the last four long, lonely, bitterly frugal years.

Our host, a man of substance, provided a princely meal ornamented with a regal omelet of the kind only the French seem to know how to make and laved us with aperitifs, two kinds of wine and magnificent cognac, followed by champagne, all of which he had hidden successfully from the searches of the Boches. Then as champagne bubbles began to glint in the torchlit darkness of the dining room, some German airplanes hurried overhead for their nightly bombing of Avranches.

CHILDREN SCATTERED The children scattered like birds before gunshot. A 12-year-old girl flattened herself against the wall and stood there trembling. A 6-year-old boy and a 3-year-old boy crawled and groveled their way under the table. Only an 18-month-old little fellow, who cannot walk very well yet or get off high chairs very easily, sat where he was, but his little mouth was wide open and his little face screwed up as if he were about to cry. However, we all tried to soothe them, but it was impossible to induce the children to return to their little portions of champagne until the sound of airplanes had died out.

Then when we were well into the second bottle of champagne, the sound of an automobile stopping outside scattered the children again, only this time the little girl began to cry, putting one little-girl fist up to her eyes and crying with small sounds into that.

Then a hatless middle-aged bulky man burst into the room, picked up the first one he saw, which happened to be old "Bonne," by her grape-veined legs, waltzed her wildly around in the air while shouting with all his force, she beating at his shoulders with her fists, first with terror, then, as she recognized him, with joy. He was a neighbor who had gone into hiding on a farm near Angers three months before when the Germans tried to force him into labor in the Ruhr.

TREMORS WITH JOY "Oh, le Gestapo," he kept shouting while his wife stood beside him, trembling uncontrollably all over her body with joy. "Poom poom poom mais pas poom poom moi." When the American forces entered Angers, he returned to his family.

Later we strolled through a village to walk the champagne from our heads. We were stopped everywhere, but the only password we needed was, "We are the Americans." News of our arrival, it seemed, had penetrated everywhere. The night as usual to a city dweller in the country seemed to crackle with thousands of small mysterious sounds, but otherwise it was very tranquil.

Then a very ancient auto came bumping down the street. It was a five-seater cab, but 11 men poured uproariously out of it, all of them bristling in all directions with guns. They had whooped over to a nearby farm which was being raided by four hungry Nazi soldiers, who were looting at gunpoint, and had taken the Nazis prisoner. They left two of their number to march the prisoners back while they hurried toward town to be the first to make the night loud with the story.

"And every morning before dawn," one of them told me, "we all hurry out into the woods and fields to find sleeping Germans before they awake. We waken the sleeping beauties with a kiss."

He pointed meaningfully to his big, hobnailed German boot.

Elks Lose Fish and 'Goat'— Fry Advertising Also Gone! Some person with a sardonic sense of humor has taken a big fish that belonged to the members of the Elks Club. By so doing, he got the goat of the Elks. As a result it appears that the Elks are now mourning the loss of both their fish and their goat!

It all happened because the Elks are planning for their big annual fish fry September 9. In order to advertise this event fittingly, members of the club had a big fish made, covered it with canvas and painted it and then set it up on the lawn of the club at Peachtree and Fourth street, N. W. There the fish reposed—until early yesterday. Then it disappeared and the Elks are wondering who could have taken it.

The fish was about 12 feet long and two feet high and was fixed up so that it looked like a fish just out of a pond—a big fish out of a big pond. It had a cast iron

William Grant Killed in Crash

William D. Grant, 24, formerly of Atlanta, a pilot officer in the Royal Air Force and the grandson of Mrs. John W. Grant, of 81 Pace's Ferry road, and Mrs. Linton C. Hopkins Sr., of 997 Peachtree Battle avenue, N. W., died Saturday from injuries suffered in a plane crash, relatives here have been notified.

No details of his death were given.

Born in Atlanta, his parents moved to Boston, Mass., when he was young. He attended a Boston high school, and was a student at Massachusetts Tech when he went overseas 20 months ago and joined the R.A.F.

Other survivors include his wife, the former Miss Juliana Sweetzer, of Brookline, Mass.; a son, William D. Grant Jr., and a brother, A. A. Grant.

U. of Ga. Will Provide Courses for Vets' Wives

ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 13.—(AP)—Wives of veterans as well as veterans themselves may pursue special courses at the University of Georgia under the university's war service program.

A special nine-month course in homemaking will be offered, beginning in September, especially for wives of servicemen, Dean Mary E. Creswell announced today.

Other courses are available for the veterans' wives, also, she said.

Atlanta Woman Injured In Tennessee Bus Crash

ATHENS, Tenn., Aug. 13.—(AP)—A crash in which an automobile and a Tennessee Coach Company bus were involved four miles east of here early today caused injury to 25 persons, seven of whom were reported in serious condition.

The most seriously injured included Mrs. Alma Davis, Atlanta, Ga.

Plan Marietta Outing For Fort Mac Wounded

MARIETTA, Ga., Aug. 13.—The Cobb county chapter of the American Red Cross will bring 20 wounded or sick servicemen from the hospital at Fort McPherson to Marietta Tuesday for an outing at the home of Mrs. James T. Anderson Jr., on the Burnt Hickory road.

THE CROWDS CAME—Family day at the Bell Aircraft plant near Marietta attracted crowds of visitors yesterday to the gigantic "hatchery" where come to life the deadly birds aimed at the enemy, the B-29 Superfortress. Here is a typical scene of families of workers inside the plant.

2-Way Threat Harasses Vichy

SHAFF, Monday, Aug. 14.—(AP)

For the third successive day Allied air might hammered at German defenses along the Mediterranean coast of France yesterday while inland the Maquis rallied to a new campaign in a bid to seal off escape of Nazi forces or Vichy-ites in the region below the Loire river now shakily held by forces of Gen. Johannes Blaskowitz.

There was no suggestion of a German stand in strength, or that Gen. Blaskowitz could make one without draining his whole Mediterranean coast in an exposure, tactically at least, equally as dangerous.

By this two-way threat he is forced to split his 10-division defense force so badly that he is left with insufficient strength to hold against a major onslaught from either direction.

His 10 divisions thus have been turned by a single great strategic stroke into a potentially little more than a garrison of suicidal prospects.

The Algiers radio all day broadcast the French provisional government's instructions to the Maquis to cut off Germans who might try to flee north to Paris between the Loire and the Garonne and to seal the Pyrenees passes to keep Germans or Vichy French from flight to Spain.

Turks Claim Germans Evacuate Aegean Isles

ISTANBUL, Aug. 13.—(AP)—The newspaper Yeni Sabah, in a dispatch quoting Izmir (Smyrna) reports, said the Germans were evacuating the Aegean islands of Mytilene, Chios and Samos.

The reports said all of the German air force had been withdrawn from the islands and only a few German soldiers remained.

BLOOD DONOR DATES IMPORTANT, TOO!

The voice on the telephone is always nice—"I'm sorry, but I must cancel my appointment for a blood donation today—and most of the time apologetic.

At least the folks who call the Red Cross Blood Donor Service to cancel their appointments seem to always have a reason. It's either an abscessed tooth, a cold, another appointment, high blood pressure, low blood pressure, general poor health or just "plain fright," according to the samples recorded every day in the center's telephone room.

The majority of prospective donors don't bother to call or to explain when the appointments are missed.

Of course, the Red Cross center appreciates the calls by those who can't make it. Mrs. Francis L. Abreu, director, said, but it would be nicer if those who can't make it one day could make another date and show up.

There are a lot of fellows who have made a date in Berlin and Tokyo—and they will keep it, too, with no excuses.

Brookhaven, and his buddy, Pfc. Charlie L. Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Hall, of Newnan, were in the same paratrooper outfit and shipped overseas together in January. Before that, they won their wings at the same ceremony at Fort Benning, Ga., and jumped together in advanced training at Camp McCall, N. C. In May they celebrated their 22d birthdays.

Mrs. Coffee, the former Jeanette Gentle, and Mrs. Hall, the former Emily Gilbert, reside at 846 Brookline street, S. W. They became brides in the spring of 1943.

Coffee, who attended North Fulton high school and Georgia Tech, was formerly employed as assistant manager at an Atlanta drive-in. He has four brothers in the service, Daniel Lee and Jack T. Coffee, with the Navy in the Pacific; Cpl. Patrick H. Coffee and Sgt. William J. Coffee, in Italy.

Hall was employed by a textile firm before joining the Army and attended school in Newnan.

Warships Sink 5 Nazi Craft

LONDON, Aug. 13.—(P)—Prowling Allied warships, maintaining a blockade in the Bay of Biscay and along the channel coast around Brittany, sank five enemy ships and possibly a sixth in a series of skirmishes yesterday, the admiralty announced today.

One small convoy of three armed trawlers and a supply ship was caught off Pointe de Penmarc'h-Finisterre, below the beleaguered Breton port of Brest, and was wiped out by a force of British and Canadian destroyers.

Whether the convoy was trying to evacuate personnel from Brittany was not made clear.

Another force, led by the British cruiser Diadem and including at least one Polish warship, torpedoed and sank a medium armed merchant vessel west of La Rochelle in the Bay of Biscay.

Earlier, British motor torpedo boats on patrol in the channel intercepted an auxiliary vessel under escort of eight R-boats off Le Havre and pressed home a torpedo attack on the larger ship, despite heavy enemy fire. Two large explosions were heard and it was considered likely the auxiliary vessel was hit.

The Allied warships suffered no casualties in all these skirmishes.

British Tell Loss Of 7 War Vessels

LONDON, Aug. 13.—(P)—The admiralty announced today the loss of the destroyers Isis and Quorn, three minesweepers and two trawlers in invasion operations.

The Isis, of the Intrepid class, displaced 1,370 tons and helped shell Genoa and Livorno in February, 1941, and landed Commandos during the Malayan campaign. The Quorn was a Hunt class ship of 804 tons. The Isis had a normal complement of 145 men and the Quorn slightly fewer.

Fighters, Ack-Ack Beat Off Robots

LONDON, Aug. 13.—(P)—Sharp-eyed fighter pilots and anti-aircraft gunners beat back flying bomb attacks today, exploding a number of the missiles over the sea as southern England and London enjoyed a comparatively quiet Sunday.

A few robots got through, however, inflicting battle scars on two churches, one of which dates back to the 12th century; a famous

English school, a hospital, a post office and wrecking a row of 14th century houses.

Deaths were not high and a dozen persons were dug out of the wreckage after amazing escapes.

117th Meeting Opened At Salem Campgrounds

By MARY KEY WYNNE,
Constitution Staff Writer.

COVINGTON, Ga., Aug. 13.—The atmosphere of "old time religion" settled around Salem Campgrounds, a few miles from here, with the formal opening of the 117th annual meeting today. Some 1,500 people gathered from all parts of the state to hear Bishop Arthur J. Moore, of Atlanta, in his address to the campers this morning.

Bishop Moore spoke in the large open tent which has been the meeting place for Georgia crusaders since 1828. The tent, a wooden structure, is still supported by massive hand-hewn rafters, fastened with heavy wood pegs. It has long been the "mecca" of religious groups in this section of the country.

Similar to the old-fashioned revival, the congregation ranged in age, from babies in arms to older people who have made annual trips to Salem since the latter part of the 19th century. The characteristic palmetto fans were waved back and forth as the sermon was delivered.

The preaching was interrupted at intervals with the inevitable crying and cooing of infants and the conventional "amens" from gentlemen approving statements made by Bishop Moore.

The theme of the Methodist bishop's sermon was based on the home. "The home," Bishop Moore said, "is the birthplace of everything that is noble, fine and endurable. Our churches, hospitals and libraries are built on the principles of our homes."

Bishop Moore made an attack on the many marriages which are today performed in an office of the justice of the peace. "I deplore the growing tendency of the young people to disassociate marriage from its spiritual value," he insisted on more weddings in the church, saying that marriage is not a civil contract.

Memorial services for the late Henry Y. McCord were conducted this morning by Judge James C. Davis, of Decatur. McCord, who passed away a few weeks after the Salem meeting last year, was an outstanding figure in the camp affairs for over 50 years, and was for several years chairman of the board of trustees for Salem.

The board has made plans to improve and enlarge the camp grounds of Salem. Today they presented a report to the congregation which gave the estimated cost as $2,500. During the meeting an appeal was made for subscriptions and cash donations to cover the expense. Of this amount, $2,480 was raised in pledges and ready cash.

Carrying on the tradition of their father, "Uncle Henry" McCord, Harry and Jeff McCord, of Atlanta, prepared a barbecue dinner for about 200 campers. Others enjoyed a family picnic spread or lunch in the modernized Salem hotel.

Camping services will continue through the week, and the camp will close Sunday with sermons from Dr. Ferguson Wood and Rev. Marshall Nelms.

PRAYER FOR YOUNG AND OLD—(Left) Bowing their head in prayer during the morning church service at the old Salem camp grounds are (front to rear) Ward H. Ogletree, of Covington; J. H. Pace, of Avondale Estates, and Robert Lee Avery, of Atlanta. Ogletree, 78, has been attending the annual meetings at Salem for 73 years. (Right) Mrs. Nonnie Rice, of Atlanta, leads her Sunday school class in a closing prayer. The little boys, with heads bent and eyes shut tight, are (front to rear) Billy Wilson, of Porterdale; Artis Standard, of Salem; Troy Binford, of Rocky Plains; Frank Cooper, of Porterdale; David Plunket and Johnny Farmer.

Dr. T. A. Lifsey, Dentist, Dies

Dr. Truman A. Lifsey, of West Palm Beach, Fla., formerly of Barnesville, Ga., a dentist, died Saturday night in a private hospital here. He had been in failing health for two years.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow in the First Methodist church of Barnesville, with the Rev. W. R. Sisson, officiating. Burial will be in the city cemetery.

Besides his wife, he is survived by a son, T. A. Lifsey Jr.; a grandson, Walter Lifsey; a granddaughter, Janet Lifsey; three sisters, all of Macon, and four brothers, Olin Lifsey, of Macon; M. A. Lifsey, of Reynolds; L. A. Lifsey, of Dublin, and Col. C. Q. Lifsey, of the Army, overseas.

A native of Barnesville, Dr. Lifsey practiced there until a few years ago when he moved to West Palm Beach. After maintaining a dental office in Florida for a short time his health became bad and he had conducted a real estate business for the last two years. He was a Mason and a member of the Methodist church.

CHICKEN AND DRUMSTICKS APLENTY!—Proving that preachers really do go for fried chicken, Bishop Arthur J. Moore of Atlanta, leads the way down tables filled with food at the traditional McCord dinner at Salem Campgrounds. Following the bishop are Harry H. McCord, of Atlanta, one of the hosts, and Dean George Roach.

First American Flying From Soviet To Down Nazi Plane Visits Atlanta

Capt. Cullen Hoffman, 27, the first American pilot to shoot down a German plane while operating from a Russian base, is now in Atlanta on a visit to the home of his sister, Mrs. Clement J. Ford, wife of the architect, at 240 West Andrews drive, N. W. Hoffman, whose home is in Asheville, N. C., arrived in the United States last Friday on a 30-day furlough.

Assigned to the 15th Army Air Force, based in Italy, Hoffman is the pilot of a Mustang (P-51) fighter plane. He was one of a group selected to fly from Italy to Russia last June. This was a bombing expedition and the fighter pilots went along to protect the bombers.

On the way to Russia, the American bombers dropped their loads over chosen objectives, doing great damage to German installations and Rumanian oil fields. Then the bombers, accompanied by the fighters, continued on to Russia.

where they landed at a Russian air base.

The American fighters and bombers operated out of this Russian base for 10 days before returning to Italy. It was on this assignment that Capt. Hoffman achieved the distinction of being the first American pilot to shoot down a German plane, a Junkers 88, while operating out of a Russian base. It was Hoffman's fifth victory in the air over German planes.

Hoffman went into the Air Force in January, 1942, as a cadet. He came first to Fort McPherson and then went to Maxwell Field, Ala., for his training. He was overseas in October, 1943, and saw service in North Africa, Sicily and Italy.

large enough to allow formation of 100 corporations, each of which would purchase 100 acres of land. The corporations would borrow up to $3,000 to finance initial operations, if necessary.

"Mr. Callaway's plan is specifically designed to solve the south's agricultural problems, but it could apply just as well nationally, with minor changes, and might well be the salvation of postwar agriculture," commented Russell, who is chairman of the senate's agriculture appropriations subcommittee.

Ramspeck declared "the primary advantage of Mr. Callaway's proposal is that it offers a good opportunity for thousands of small-town businessmen to invest in their own communities and then be close enough to their investment to see how it operates."

"Also, it will allow many good farmers who could get funds in no other way to obtain machinery and operate their farms scientifically," he asserted.

U. S. Imports To Gauge Postwar Export Trade

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(P) Expansion of American foreign trade in the postwar years and, almost as directly, the erection of a sound world economic order, depend on how much goods and services the United States is willing to buy from abroad, the Foreign Policy Association said in a report made public today.

The study, prepared by Howard P. Whidden Jr., of the association's research staff, asserts: "It is not unreasonable to contemplate a great expansion of American foreign trade unless the postwar period is to be one of economic nationalism, quasi-isolationism, and narrowly regarded self-sufficiency."

The problem comes down, the report said, to how to get dollars into foreigners' hands so they can buy. Whidden argues for capital investment abroad, loans, and other measures for making American funds available, but says American imports are the real key, pointing out that they constitute

Louis Bromfield Says He'll Vote for Dewey

MANSFIELD, Ohio, Aug. 13.—Author-Farmer Louis Bromfield, a Democrat, said today he would vote this fall for Thomas E. Dewey, Republican presidential candidate.

Bromfield declared President Roosevelt and the administration "have grown so old and quarrelsome that it's time for a change in Washington." He predicted "at least one-fourth of the Democrats in Ohio will be against the President, and three or four million throughout the nation will vote Republican in November."

The Ohioan added that indications now point to the election of Dewey, but added that progress of the war might alter the election picture.

115,000 PRISONERS

Allied armies already had taken 115,000 prisoners since D-Day and contacted 40 Nazi divisions—the cream of the German army in northwest Europe. Since Saturday 5,760 prisoners had been taken.

An Associated Press frontline dispatch declared this wholesale withdrawal was the greatest German concession of defeat since the invasion.

A German broadcast said Nazi bombers had struck at Le Mesle, on the Sarthe river, 13 miles north-east of Alencon and 83 miles west of Paris. It declared there were heavy forces of American tanks and troops at Le Mesle.

Even without the bomb seal-off, it was a race between German retreat and Allied attack to determine whether the Germans got out with tattered tag-ends of what once was a great German army—or went to death in an entrapment that would open up the whole west of France.

"MASS NAZI TREK"

A dispatch from the British front described the German retreat as a mass trek toward the Seine by tens of thousands of vehicles, many fired and torn by bombs. There was no indication whether Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge hoped to rally for a major stand on the Seine, or even Paris.

The greatest of the new assaults to crush the Germans inside their broken bulge was unopposed at daylight by the American First Army along the whole half-moon-shaped westernmost tip of the wedge, from which the Nazis a week ago tried to split the Allies in Normandy and Brittany.

Front reports described it as a general attack all the way from Vire to Mortain and said the initial thrust had carried forward several miles, sweeping up hundreds of prisoners. Here, too, the Germans were observed withdrawing. At the same time they rushed up at least one rested division in a frantic effort to block a U. S. breakthrough.

This American push was slowly rolling back the last of some nine German divisions against assault positions of the British and Canadians in a squeeze play which left some forces already hopelessly trapped, and others facing little brighter prospects.

Berlin admitted loss of both

OFF TO CAMP—With military aspect, members of the Atlanta squadron of the Civil Air Patrol left Atlanta yesterday for a 10-day training period at the Army air

Mortain and Sourdeval, a few miles north.

Thirty miles behind this scene of the Germans' abortive counter-attack last week the British and Canadians were bearing down on Falaise in the northern jaw of a still greater trap.

The Canadian First Army lunged ahead two miles to Le Mesnil and Le Biquet in a flanking thrust northwest of Falaise, and there were reports of considerable German movements even out of that last big enemy stronghold. The road from Falaise to Lisieux to the northeast was under artillery fire. Bombers sowed ruin in an arc behind this front.

The British Second Army, on the Canadian right, stabbed in toward Falaise from both sides of the Orne, forging an almost solid front from five to eight miles from that road center.

British forces were within 5,000 yards of the supporting German bastion at Conde, midway between Falaise and Vire. But enemy resistance continued stiff, suicide stands were made in Thury-Harcourt, where fighting still continued, and in other localities.

Despite the formidable defenses, the British and Canadians had gained five to ten miles all along a 25-mile front during the last week.

A spokesman for General Eisenhower, broadcasting to French civilians, declared "the liberating armies are pouring across France, and the enemy is changing the disposition of his troops and armaments each hour." It warned them to take cover when Allied planes approach, to avoid enemy routes of travel and bridges, and not to travel on bicycles during daylight because so much German transport had been destroyed that "the enemy now is moving troops on bicycles."

Airmen reported seeing streams of German truck convoys heading eastward toward Paris and Germany. On jammed roads and rail lines behind the front Eighth Air Force fighter-bombers alone destroyed or damaged almost 4,000 railway cars, over 500 locomotives, and nearly 300 trucks in two days of relentless, continuing attacks.

Since D-Day, said supreme headquarters, the planes have hit 70 German headquarters, the Army's nerve centers, and are known to have killed one general—Maj. Gen. Ritter von Elber von Dawams.

German broadcasts, besides reporting a push beyond Alencon—itsself halfway between Le Mans and Falaise—said Nazi advance patrols had pushed 43 miles down the road from Chartres before meeting the Americans. This would place U. S. forces at least 25 miles east of Le Mans, and perhaps 85 miles from Paris.

Albanian Leader Asks

For Arms, Ammunition

BARI, Aug. 16.—(Delayed)—(AP) The National Army of Liberation in Albania, now 40,000 strong, is badly in need of more arms and ammunition. Col. Bedri Spahiu, head of its mission to the Allies, reported here today.

He said the army is standing alone against the common foe, which includes, in addition to two big nationalistic elements, one to three German divisions, the Albanian gendarmerie and a new German-trained SS division.

"A little of everything" has been sent by Britain and America but nothing yet by Russia, he said. The most important assistance rendered has been that by Allied fighter bombers in raids against enemy communications, supply dumps and troop concentrations, he added.

32 Atlanta CAP Cadets Train At Waycross Army Air Base

Thirty-two cadets from the Atlanta squadron of the Civil Air Patrol are now on duty at the Army Air Base at Waycross, Ga., for a 10-day training period, joining cadets from other Georgia cities in this training. A total of 96 young men of the Civil Air Patrol are in this camp.

The Atlanta cadets left the Union bus station at 6 a. m. yesterday and arrived at Waycross during the afternoon, under the command of Lt. Edwin M. Pearce, of the Atlanta squadron. C. A. P. Flight Officer Bernard C. Castellano was second in command.

During the camp period Maj. Winship Nunnally, commander of the Georgia wing of C. A. P., and members of his staff will make a visit of inspection. Capt. Jesse L. Dobbins, commanding officer of the Atlanta squadron, and Lt. G. Mack Wynn and M. R. Dodd, also of the squadron, will also visit the camp during the latter part of the 10-day period.

Physical training, military drill, guard duty and aircraft instruction are some of the courses offered at this camp. The training and discipline are the same as that given to the cadets of the Army Air Corps.

Cadets attending the camp are Hubert Ford, Biser, E. J. Dickert, Glenn Edgar Duncan, Robert Stanley Friedman, Jack Buel Goza, Eugene Taylor Griffith, Karl Ben-the broad sector between the Seine and the battlefront.

RAF heavy bombers joined the Flying Fortresses and Liberators in plastering roads and bridges. Marauders and Havocs swarmed down, strafing roads. Fighter-bombers of the Ninth and Eighth Air Forces and Tactical Air Force darted in to hit armor, troops, locomotives, railway cars, oil cars, and all types of vehicles, hindering enemy movement behind a mass of twisted wreckage.

The weather was perfect for flying, and the enemy offered little opposition from ground guns or interceptors. Rarely have Allied planes had such a target and opportunity.

Meanwhile Mediterranean heavy bombers again smashed at military targets in southern France, in northern Italy and Yugoslavia. It was the second straight day of heavy bomber blows on Mediterranean anti-invasion defenses, and the third air blow on that sector in as many days. Tactical bombers began the assaults Friday, followed by up to 750 big bombers Saturday.

The RAF last night roared over Germany and dumped explosives on aircraft and engineering plants at Brunswick, the huge open aircraft and motor transport works at Rummelsheim, which employs 35,000 workers, the port of Kiel and Frankfurt.

Halifaxes plastered flying bomb launching sites.

Prussia along both sides of the Bialystok-Lyck railway.

By capturing Downary and Goniadz, the Russians were only three miles from the point where the railway crosses the Biebrza. The fall of Gielczyn, farther south, put one Soviet column 17 miles east of Lomza, one of the main communication centers linking enemy defense lines between Warsaw and east Prussia. The seizure of Menzhenin found other Red army units only 16 miles southeast of Lomza.

Zakharov's troops and the adjoining First White Russian army under Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky swept up 180 towns and villages during the day on a 100-mile front which has almost reached the entire length of the Bialystok-Warsaw trunk railway. A midnight Soviet bulletin said the Germans still were hurling in large forces of counterattacking reserves, and in one area the often-wrecked Hermann Goering division lost 500 killed. The Goering division previously had been knocked out by Allied troops in Tunisia, Sicily and Italy.

Germans Yield Empoli On Arno, Without Fight

ROME, Aug. 13.—(AP)—The Arno river city of Empoli, on Florence's west flank, fell to the Eighth Army without a fight today as the Germans probed Allied lines with patrols whose flagging spirits were fired by a Hitler proclamation that soon the Reich's armies would resume the offensive.

The task of bringing help to the hungry population of historic Florence, abandoned by the contending armies to spare its treasured art and monuments, was immeasurably complicated meanwhile by Partisans and Fascists battling in the streets.

Empoli, which lies about 15 miles west of Florence on the south bank of the Arno, had been stoutly defended by the Germans in retreat toward their Gothic line, but Eighth Army tanks and infantry found the town clear except for snipers as they moved up to solidify their hold on the Arno to the sea.

The headquarters of Gen. Alexander reported that the indiscriminate sniping within Florence was making difficult the task of carrying food, water and medicine across the Arno to the hard-pressed Florentines.

Strenuous efforts are being made to put an end to the shooting of both Partisans and Fascists, who have been fighting in the northern sections of the city for over a week.

A number of German and Fifth Army patrols tangled in brisk fighting on the south banks of the lower Arno, but there was no major engagement anywhere along the entire front yesterday, an Allied communiqué said.

Foles and Italians on the Adriatic sector enlarged their bridgehead across the Cesano river about 35 miles south of the German coastal anchor of Rimini.

Lt. Col. Eggers, commander of the German fourth parachute regiment, has been recaptured by British guards after escaping from Italian Partisans who seized him recently, it was announced.

Victim of Stabbing Confined to Hospital

Charles R. Akin, 39, of 579 Courtland street, N. E., is in Grady hospital, suffering from a stab wound in his throat. He said that as he and his wife were walking at Piedmont avenue and Pine street, a man walked up and spoke to Mrs. Akin.

When Akin objected, he said the man drew a knife and stabbed him. Examination of the wound showed that the knife narrowly escaped cutting the jugular vein.

SPELLMAN SEES POPE AGAIN

VATICAN CITY, Aug. 13.—(AP) Archbishop Francis J. Spellman will visit the Monte Cassino Abbey, famous shrine of the Benedictine Order destroyed by Allied guns and bombs, it was reliably reported today after he had another private audience with Pope Pius. It is likely his visit is connected with plans for restoring the monastery.

Guam Liberation Just

In Time For Natives

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, Pearl Harbor, Aug. 13.—(AP)—The American liberation of Guam came in the nick of time when the natives had withstood about all they could of "ill treatments and atrocities," elders of the island told Adm. Nimitz in a letter of thanks to be transmitted to the people of the United States. Nimitz has just returned from an inspection trip to reconquered Guam. While visiting a refugee camp he was handed the letter.

Telephone Lines to the Front

As battles roll on to victory and vast new areas are conquered, the need for tremendous amounts of telephone equipment becomes more and more urgent.

Since the start of the war the huge telephone manufacturing plants of the Bell System have been concentrating on the manufacture of telephone equipment for war use exclusively, to insure that there shall be no shortages of telephone equipment on the war fronts.

Just before war started, the Southern Bell Company completed a large program of expansion of central office and outside plant facilities. This enabled us to continue installing telephones after the manufacture of telephone equipment for civilian use had stopped.

Now, however, the normal reserves of switchboards, wire, cables and instruments have been used up, and we have many people on our waiting lists for service. But war's needs must come first, so for some time we at home shall continue to make the most and the best use of what we now have.

'For All Time to Come'

President Roosevelt's speech to the nation on last Saturday night will not receive the complete indorsement it merits because this is a political year and it is inevitable the opposition will fit their comments into their accustomed pattern and find something to condemn.

Despite the fact the President watered down his speech more than was necessary in a studied effort to avoid any possible cry of "politics," it remains an important and encouraging speech.

The President has seen at first hand what we have built in the Hawaiian Islands and in the long string of cruelly weather-beaten Aleutian Islands.

He sees them not merely as bastions of defense, but as important bases for trade and commerce in the postwar world of greatly increased shipping and air-freight traffic.

He intimated, too, that we will have, if we do not already have, other bases in the Pacific nearer to Japan than those we now possess, probably some of the French or English-owned islands. Treaty or a permanent mutual-aid agreement could provide the bases.

Not many Americans realize the vast area of Alaska. It is difficult to visit. Nor do many of us appreciate its resources and the fact that it is the last of our frontiers where the pioneer spirit still may find new lands, forests, mines, untouched and as challenging as any prospect which lured men and women westward when this country's west was new and untouched. It seems even the President himself, student and geographer that he is, did not fully comprehend all the possibilities of Alaska.

At any rate, his enthusiasm for what he saw prompted him to visualize Alaska as a place where many of the soldiers of this war, whose roots are not firmly set in any one locality, might want to establish themselves. It may be that he had in his mind what many thoughtful Americans have had in their minds—a recent survey which showed that an approximate 60 per cent of the men in service hadn't really liked the jobs they had before the war and wanted to "get into something new." It is a good idea. We must develop Alaska.

The President saw, and properly we think, the importance of Alaska and the Pacific northwest, in the trade of the future. There will be trade through Siberia. There will be air and sea routes to China and Asia.

The President made it plain the United States wanted no territory on the continent of Asia.

He made it equally plain that the power of Japan must, and will be, crushed for all time to come. He revealed that more than a million men are overseas engaged in the warfare in the Pacific, and that the war goes well.

He spoke of conferences with "my good friend, Douglas MacArthur," and of plans made. Those plans, we feel sure, will begin to reach their peak in mid-autumn.

It was a good report. It was heartening, sound, and it looked toward the future with vision and with prophecy.

Not Worth Picking Up

Numerous stories from France since the present great drive by American armor got under way, tell of Germans, trying to surrender, being either ignored by the fast-moving doughboys or told to give themselves up to the French civilians.

It must be terribly embarrassing to one of the self-proclaimed "supermen," one who has strutted around among the helpless French for months or years, to decide to become a prisoner of the Allies and then find he is so inconsequential our troops do not consider him worth the trouble of hauling him in!

The German with overwhelming mechanics of war was able to ride roughshod over weaker and ill-prepared nations a few years ago. But, as an individual, without his superior weight of arms, he is nothing, an inconsequential nobody whose surrender is a matter of indifference!

A Real Victory

There is nothing to be gained by attempting to belittle the victory the Japanese have won at Hengyang. They have taken this Chinese city, the most important objective in the Chinese arena of conflict, after a siege that lasted more than a month and that succeeded only after all the Chinese defenders had been killed.

It is the greatest victory the Japanese have won since 1942. It opens the way for them to split China in two and will pose most serious problems for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and his staff. It will, undoubtedly, delay the final defeat of the Japanese.

Not that the Hengyang success will alter the final outcome of the war. That is settled. The story of the Pacific is sufficient guarantee. But many will die who would otherwise have lived because Hengyang has fallen.

Lovely Characters, the Nazis

One gets an insight into the delightful character of the Nazi youth, from whom all feelings of decency, affection, gentleness and honor have been squeezed, in the trials of the three Japanese girls who aided them in a brief escape from prison.

The three Japanese-American women testified they were motivated by love when they assisted the Germans to escape. They did not, they insisted, plan treason. They did it all for love. A photograph of a loving embrace was in evidence.

And how did the Germans react? They testified against the three girls, assisting the prosecution in a characteristic effort to make easier their own lot.

THE PULSE OF THE PUBLIC

(The Constitution welcomes letters from its readers. They must be signed, should not exceed 200 words.)

THE F. E. P. C.

Editor, Constitution: In spite of the fact that the majority of the nation's newspapers have long supported the efforts of the FEPC, the southern white press has continually attacked this agency. It has been gratifying that until recently, the Atlanta Constitution has taken little part in the majority of these attacks. However, on August 7 and August 11 it added its voice to other southern critics, attempting to place upon FEPC the blame for the Philadelphia strike. Instead of waiting for the facts in the case to be revealed by the federal grand jury, and instead of recognizing that this strike has been condemned by many of the nation's leading papers as an undemocratic demonstration with many underlying causes, these southern critics have chosen to indict the FEPC as having sole responsibility.

It is an acknowledged fact that one-sided presentation of news does not make for national unity nor community good will. We believe that newspapers should be instruments for the public good. We further believe that partial presentation of news is grossly unfair to the total community. By and large the southern press has failed to tell the public the truth, the whole truth, about the FEPC. Such practice does not contribute to the development of sound community relationships.

The executive order establishing the FEPC states that, among other things, there shall be no discrimination in employment in war industries. The Atlanta Constitution states that Senator Russell "has no quarrel with the FEPC as created" and urges Mr. Russell to "keep this before the senate of the United States until the FEPC is abolished or forced to do only the job it was created to do." The Constitution's principal concern seems to be one of jurisdiction and authority. It states that "by no stretching of the point or imagination can it be said the FEPC had any business whatsoever dealing with the railway business in Philadelphia."

In its necessary working relationship with the War Manpower Commission, the FEPC has accepted the War Manpower Commission's list of essential war industries as an operating definition. Indeed, on that list are railroads and local street railway systems. We believe that "by no stretching of the point or imagination" can this war be won without the essential services of these two industries, and therefore agree with the War Manpower Commission in their inclusion on the list. We further believe that any law or order must be interpreted in order to be put into action. The FEPC, like all other organizations, must establish a basis for operation. What better definition of "war industries" can be had than that set forth by the War Manpower Commission, which is the agency responsible for the mobilization and utilization of the nation's manpower to win a war?

Therefore, it is our considered opinion that the FEPC is attempting to do "only the job it was created to do." And in this particular instance, we respectfully submit to the Atlanta Constitution that its position is not warranted by the facts.

Equal economic opportunity is one of the most important problems facing the American Negro today. Indeed, it is a major problem facing the nation and the world. Regardless of its critics, the FEPC represents the most tangible evidence on the part of the government to secure economic justice for those who face racial, religious, and national barriers. The test of any civilization is the degree to which it protects the rights of those who are unable to protect their own. The FEPC has done much to protect the rights of all minorities.

We believe that the majority of southern white people know that there must be equal economic opportunity for all if the problems of our region are to be solved. We believe that the majority of southern white people would support any effort to bring about economic justice, including that of the FEPC, if given an opportunity through a full and impartial presentation of the facts. We believe that the southern white press has an obligation to all citizens to make such a presentation.

In the interests of a fair presentation of the facts, we request that this letter be published in full, and that it be placed as prominently in your paper as have been your criticisms.

Top Minnows

Editor, Constitution: With the local two-bits-a-dozen top-water minnow dictators to be found in the local boards and bureaus who do not follow priority ratings but instead cater to their own selected groups and cliques, how can you be for F. D. R.?

I think that any farmer or business man who votes for Roosevelt and the New Deal should be held under, not in, the insane asylum at Milledgeville. When it costs more to produce anything is it sensible to reduce the selling price? Anyone that sees different is either prejudiced, crazy or dumb about production.

Roosevelt, New Dealers, dictators do not want clear thinkers. They want obeyers.

Let's Motor to France, Via Moscow

It is only 36 miles from the United States to Russia.

One of these days, perhaps in the lifetime of we old gaffers in our forties, it will be perfectly possible, and practical, to get in one's car and drive to Moscow, Chungking, China; Delhi, India, or to Paris, Madrid—even to London—by putting the car on a channel boat for a two-hour ferry trip across to the landing at Dover.

I have left out a few way stations one may make on such a trip, such as Turkey, Iran, Iraq, Poland, Norway, Sweden, Finland. And others.

Really, I am ashamed of that indefatigable person, the American tourist. Can it be that gas coupons have crushed his once indomitable will; that he no longer strain toward the horizon and hotel clerks to whom he may tell, as he registers for himself and the misus, how they made 587 miles that day and could have gone on but decided to stop on account of the town having such a pleasant look?

Has the American tourist quit cold?

I do not seem to have heard much of late except a few plans to drive up the Alaska highway. A few hardy souls have mentioned Mexico and South America. That's all right. But that trip is easy as pie.

Why not a little drive over to Normandy to see where we landed on that fateful morning in early June, going via Moscow?

It will be possible in less than 20 years.

That is my honest guess. And the only stimulant I have had is coffee.

THE BERING STRAIT President Roosevelt came back from his journey to Alaska and the Aleutians and spoke of the great flow of trade which was sure to move between Alaska and our great Northwest and Siberia.

That is quite inevitable.

Thousands of airplanes and many thousands of tons of freight have moved over that route already.

Russia is as aware of it as we.

Now, as to that tourist trip you can start planning—

It is but 36 miles from Alaska to Cape Dezhneva in Siberia.

There are islands in between, about midway, as a matter of fact. It would be, measured against the tremendous engineering jobs already done, a relatively simple task to bridge that narrow body of water.

The Alaskan highway already is built. It will require considerable more attention and work before it will be ready for tourist travel. But the basic construction job is done.

Building that road was a more difficult engineering task, by far, than would be the building of a bridge across the Bering strait.

There is a little known bit of history about the dream of a bridge from the United States to Russia. Such a plan was made in the late nineties and some preliminary surveys were made.

There also was a plan for a tunnel under the strait, just as there were plans for a tunnel under the English channel. Work actually was begun on that job and some progress made before a decision was reached to abandon it.

So, this is no new dream and no fantastic idea.

It is perfectly possible and it will be done. Russia is sure to build a great network of roads once the war is done. So will China, but at a much slower pace than the Soviets. The idea of a motor tour from this country to Europe, traveling always by road, is not really fantastic. It will come easily in the lifetime of this generation.

PETER THE GREAT It was not until 1728 that the then civilized world knew for sure that Asia was not connected with America.

Time was, of course, when it was. The theory is that the first life to come to this continent came in waves from Asia, the people walking across the then existing link and coming later, perhaps, in small craft as they could at this very day.

Peter the Great, who was so forthright a person that even the Soviets have made of this Russia Tar one of their heroes, sent Vitus Bering, a Danish sea captain who had done well in the war against Sweden, to make a voyage of discovery in the Sea of Kamchatka.

In 1741 he went back to determine if the land he had seen on the American shore was the mainland or merely islands. It was on this voyage his ship was wrecked on a bleak, ice-covered island, where he died.

One day automobiles will spin by, minus gas coupons and re-capped tires, where his small ships ventured.

I can hardly wait to see what a Siberian tourist camp will look like, and here and now I respectfully petition the Soviet to outlaw all "Bar-B-Q" signs. And, please, no "good eats" signs either.

Haunted by the Name Of Town in France

There is a town in Brittany which has, since the American armies captured that French peninsula, been in the news. The name of the place haunts me. I have a dim sense of familiarity with the name, yet cannot place in what way it is so familiar.

The place is Quimper, not far from Brest. According to Webster, the dictionary man, it is pronounced "Kamper," with the first "a" short and the second long.

My haunting familiarity with the name Quimper connects, uncertainly, with two ideas. The first is chinaware, or something like that. It seems to me I have heard of "Quimper ware," though neither dictionary nor encyclopedia offers any supporting evidence.

Secondly, I have a faint notion it was in some book, some well-known classic of the recent days, that the town of Quimper became familiar, at least, insofar as it's name goes.

Can anyone help me to clarify these persistent and tantalizing, but so illusive, name memories?

A SUCKER CAUGHT Heard an amusing story about a man and a book the other day. It seems the collector of that type of curiosities of the book world which cannot be sold openly. Even with the modern sophistication in the printed word there are some books which have to be bootlegged and which collectors keep secretly, under lock and key, away from the eye of the casual visitor. Books, you know, that are too, too, naughty.

Well, this collector of such naughty books heard of one and decided he would like to own a copy. He contacted his favorite purveyor, or agent, for such volumes and made his wishes known. In due course the agent discovered a copy of the work in question and sold it to his client. The price paid, I am told, was $16.50.

And the joke is that, although the book cannot be sold openly in Georgia, it is so sold in some other states. And our friend the collector could have secured as many copies as he desired at $3 per, merely by sending order and cash to the publisher, a San Francisco house.

ITALIAN CAMPAIGN It is but natural that most of our attention be centered upon the more spectacular fighting in France and in Russia, rather than on Italy. We are interested, of course, and elated at each success by General Clark's Fifth Army or by the comrades in arms of the British Eighth Army. To say nothing of the Poles, French and other fighters for freedom along the front from Pisa to the Adriatic.

Nevertheless, to most of us, the Italian fighting has been relegated to a very secondary place in our daily war realizations. That the Italian front is extremely vital in the overall strategy of the European operations is pointed out by a captured German army officer, now a member of that "National Committee to Free Germany," formed among German prisoners of war in Russia.

Speaking from Moscow, this German officer, a Colonel Van-hoven, says: "German propaganda has been trying for many months to minimize the importance of the fighting in Italy. Events stand in marked contrast with those propaganda efforts.

"Kesselring will have to withdraw further northwards, and the Allied air forces will find an ever shorter route to targets in the southern and eastern France, in southern Germany and Austria, and the entire Balkans. Defeat will jeopardize the Balkans and positions in the south of France. This will mean the complete destruction of armament works in these territories; it will mean complete disorganization of all transport. In Rumania, oil production will be completely paralyzed. These losses, together with losses in the war industries of northern Italy, will be yet another catastrophe for Hitler. Moreover, the occupation of northern Italy will render Hitler's position in southern France most precarious."

ARMIES OF THE NEAR EAST And, speaking of the Balkans, it would not be surprising if, in the near future, a new and dramatic development should occur in the general area of the Eastern Mediterranean.

Don't forget that strong Allied forces have been waiting, marking time, in that area, for a couple of years at least.

Be sure the Allied high command will use those forces when the right moment for the most effective blow comes.

WESTBROOK PEGLER

Tire Union

NEW YORK—Last winter a man from Akron called up and said we were losing a great many of those big tires for artillery and other big war machines and bombers because the union rules made it impossible for willing workers to produce as fast as they would like to.

If they exceeded the limits set by the group of unions represented by Sidney Hillman, of the Political Action Committee, to whom Francis Biddle, the attorney general, made a furtive political pilgrimage during the Democratic convention, they would be heckled and persecuted, they might be expelled from the union and, thus, fired altogether; and they might be beaten up by the goons.

This man argued that an inquiring reporter could do some good by exposing the situation, but I thought not. The American people are just so numb and blasé that they no longer give a damn. We have had thousands of such cases. Thurman Arnold made a big factual record of man-wasting practices enforced on workers by the unions and the American people just lawned him off.

Since then, as before, Biddle's Department of Justice has been protecting the unions even though the Army is crying up saboteurs, especially of those tires. We even hear today that some number of American soldiers will be killed in France for lack of those Akron tires which might have been but aren't.

Shortage Felt

The Akron man said the shortage would be felt in about three months. Now it is here and a survey by the War Manpower Commission confirms all that he said. The success of the advance following the invasion has been jeopardized by restrictions on the production of individual workers. And this restriction was enforced at the very time when Paul McNutt was wiping out the last vestige of your right to find your own job and work at it, without joining a union. McNutt pretends we are short of manpower, but that is a fake. We have it to waste. But the survey is confidential, and may never be revealed, because it throws the guilt on the CIO, under Hillman; and the CIO is raising money and campaigning for Roosevelt's fourth term. What chance for his life has your son got against that combination?

Another reason I didn't tackle the Akron story is that it wouldn't do a bit of good against the Roosevelt propaganda. Biddle has announced that the Roosevelt government is tied with the unions and Hillman and his Communist front are collecting political assessments from millions of straight Americans to be spent for the fourth term.

De Lorenzo

One of Hillman's crowd calling himself De Lorenzo, already had said flatly that if it came to a question of sacrificing the life of your son for lack of something to fight with, or sacrificing some gain by an aggregation of malingerers loafing in his union, he would let your kid die. Not his kid. He has no kids in the war. Not him, either; he is young enough and all that but he is a Hillman unioner. But your boy, yes. Let him die.

After much stalling, Biddle's department finally had to do something about this low crook who had said he would let your son die. But Biddle didn't do anything to the union which still keeps De Lorenzo in the same power and authority and defends him in its union and in dirty propaganda.

All Biddle did was convict him of making a false statement under oath. He gets 30 days for that and a fine of $500, but the union can pay the fine.

After McNutt forces you to join the same union, it can collect money from you toward payment of the fine.

Exaggerated Do you think the Akron story is exaggerated? If so, here is part of the court opinion in a case of eight Akron Firestone employees who beat hell out of a man who tried to work his best.

"The evidence reveals a conspiracy on the part of certain tire-builders to intimidate Raymond Elliott into curtailing his production to conform to the union men's ideas of a proper daily output," the court said.

"Union tire-builders congregated around the machine upon which Elliott was doing his work, and heckled him by calling him names, wringing his neck and threatening him that he could not perform his duties. Likewise they refused to discharge their duties, with a resultant work stoppage and loss of production of war combat equipment.

"On Monday, March 29, 1943, a large group of tirebuilders assembled around this machine and some of the defendants took Elliott to the outer gate where he was turned over to more of the defendants. These, by force, took Elliott to a parking lot where, in typical gang fashion, they set upon him, beat him, kicked him, and among other injuries inflicted, broke his jaw.

"As to Elliott, the only offense of which he might be said to be guilty was a whole-hearted attempt to do a full day's work each day in order to facilitate the production of war materials."

Keeping Something From the Boys

This is to admit that I have been wrong about Senator Taft, of Ohio, especially when I thought that he couldn't possibly be as stupid as he looks.

Senator Taft, the youngest of the old guard, is the gentleman largely responsible for the utterly ridiculous amendment to the soldier voting law which has had the effect of banning from service posts practically all literature except cook and comic books.

Under the guise of prohibiting the distribution of political propaganda to the personnel of the armed forces, Messrs. Taft and associates have made it impossible for servicemen to read anything but leaves in the bottom of a teacup until it has been thoroughly analyzed for political implications.

It's true, of course, that at last reports GIs were still allowed access to the Bible. But I look for that to be changed once the GOP realizes that, where it says that about a little child shall lead them, there is no mention of the child having a moustache.

Seriously, I am worried by such manifestations of official asininity as the banning of the new film based on the life of Woodrow Wilson from post theatres.

How long, I mean, if the current trend continues, will it be before the Republicans insist that soldiers draw down their monthly pay—not in greenbacks, all of which bear the signature of that arch-Neanderthal, Henry Morgenthau—but in pennies embellished with Honest Abe's physiognomy?

One must admire the Republicans and their new-found determination to shelter the nation's fighting men. Everyone wants to do something for our soldiers and sailors. But who, other than the GOP, would have ever thought of doing their thinking for them?

Not having seen the picture, "Wilson," I wouldn't know for sure. But I'll bet the boys will get more ideas from Betty Grable.

GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

Roosevelt To Win By Newsmen's Poll

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—Newsweek magazine has just announced the results of its initial poll of 30 selected Washington correspondents on the presidential race.

What makes the findings interesting is that similar polls taken by the magazine in the past have never been wrong. That is to say, the consensus of the correspondents taking part in other elections of the kind has always proven correct as to the winning candidate.

The current survey, which is only the first of the 1944 campaign with others to follow later, shows President Roosevelt is almost a two-to-one favorite among the correspondents to win re-election over Governor Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican nominee.

33 TO 17 Of the 50 Washington news writers selected to participate in the poll, 33 named Mr. Roosevelt as the candidate they expected to win in this year's presidential election. The remaining 17 named Dewey.

Taken at face value those figures do not necessarily mean anything. Out of the several hundred active members of the press in Washington it would be possible to hand pick 30 correspondents who unanimously would pick either Roosevelt or Dewey to win, depending on their political affiliations or the way their prejudices lay.

Newsweek, in order to give its poll standing, sought to strike a balance between the two groups.

Proof enough that it succeeded in this is found in the answers to another question asked in the poll: Whose election do you think would be to the best interest of the country, that of Roosevelt or Dewey? On this 23 named Dewey and 21 Roosevelt, with six undecided.

In other words, while the division among the 30 correspondents was about half and half as to whose election would be to the best interest of the country, indicating their Democratic or Republican preferences, the news writers were much more one-sided—about two-to-one—in their opinions as to who would win the election.

ADDED WEIGHT The significance of this is that regardless of how impartial a person tries to be in making an election forecast, his opinion is necessarily shaded somewhat by what he would like to see happen. Hence all the more weight is to be attached to a poll where 23 of the 50 participants indicate a personal preference for Dewey's election, while only 17 are willing to venture an opinion that he will win.

The average forecast of those predicting a Roosevelt victory gives the President 296 electoral votes out of 531 in the electoral college. A majority is 268. It is interesting to compare this with the results of a similar poll conducted by Newsweek during September of the 1940 presidential campaign.

Then 34 correspondents picked Mr. Roosevelt to win and 16 Wilkie. The average of electoral votes given the President four years ago was 312, or 16 more than he is given in the present survey. Actually Mr. Roosevelt received a total of 449 electoral votes, which showed that the correspondents, while right in the final outcome, were a bit conservative in estimating his strength.

If the same rate of error is applied to the current situation, the President's re-election is indicated by upwards of 400 electoral votes, which is just about what most Democratic organization leaders expect.

FOLLOW TRENDS Newsweek hit on the idea some years back of conducting a poll of a selected group of Washington correspondents for the reason that the news writers make a practice of following election trends closer than any other group, aside from the professional politicians perhaps.

Most or many of those selected for the poll are usually assigned to one or the other of the two major party candidates during the campaign. They may take a swing across the country with Mr. Roosevelt on one trip and then pick up Governor Dewey on another. In that way they can be relied on to get a fairly complete cross-section of political trends. They practically live with the campaign from start to finish.

If the correspondents prove wrong this time, it will be the first time a majority of them have failed to call the correct turn on a presidential contest.

Some time in October, or later on in the campaign, the same group will be called upon to give a final forecast. Unless there is some marked change in the war situation by then, however, the final preview is not expected to vary a great deal from the results shown in the current survey.

It isn't that the fighting lads are low-brow, tough and rude, There's nothing personal; it's just a friendly little feud. Now... with the proposed merger of these fighting, kindred souls There'll be no reason for "M. P.'s" nor swaggering "Shore Patrols." But there'll be complications which they'll have to straighten out Before the sailors and the Joes know what it's all about. The generals will look out of place while standing on the bridge... The admiral will falter when he tries to storm a ridge... An order will be bellowed out, to batten down the hatch, By a bosun-mate who's squatting in somebody's turnip-patch. Imagine our surprise when someone yells... "Here comes the fleet, It's gone around the courthouse square and sailing down the street!"

Well... soldiers are a grumpy bunch and frequently complain—The tars all cuss the day they signed to sail the bounding main; But, heaven bless the Union, may no complications sever (Forgive us for this wicked pun) "The Tars and Gripes, Forever!"

Baseball, Piano Playing Wonderful to This Girl

Kids playing in Piedmont Park early in the morning these days must have noticed a red-headed girl with freckles on her nose and an eager wire-haired terrier on a leash watching their baseball games hungrily.

By now she and the dog both may have leaped head-long into their arguments and at the heat of the game the red-headed girl has probably been heard to bring down Celtic curses on the head of the fielder who caught that fly ball.

On the other hand, maybe the kids in the park haven't noticed her. Maybe she's just another adult kibitzer to them—and they care not that she has the look of Uncle Sam's dog on the mails, that her coppery hair reaches her shoulders in a sleek, shining roll until she gets excited or mad and then it bristles and sends off sparks. Self-centered little mugs that they are, the kids in the park neither know nor care that that hungry look in Molly Logan's smoky, blue-gray eyes lies all the longing and loneliness of a missed childhood.

And Molly wouldn't tell them. She doesn't believe in interrupting a good ball game for grown-up chatter.

"I know how important baseball is," Molly explains carefully. "You see I'm an ex-child prodigy. I used to sneak out and play baseball with my brothers and their friends—but then I hurt this leg." She holds up a slightly crooked finger and flexed it absently. "After that it was back to the piano for keeps. Mother wouldn't let me run the risk of ruining my hands. I had to save them for the piano."

Molly tossed her gleaming head and stared off into space and then she grinned.

"But if you're thinking about feeling sorry for me," she warned, "don't. Playing the piano is pretty wonderful. In fact it is just about as wonderful as anything you can do."

And the way Molly Logan plays the piano makes that easy to believe. Born in Toronto, Canada, 25 years ago, Molly has played the piano as long as she can remember. She studied with the famous Glendora Gunn and at the age of 12 she was playing with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

After her debut with the Minneapolis Symphony, Molly went on the radio and crystal sets the world over gave out with a two-hour show featuring a funny little Irish girl who played the piano, talked, recited and sang.

Being a one-woman show occupied Molly during most of her teens, but her mother still wanted her to be a great pianist more than anything else and the Lo-

Life in the Infantry Is Far From a Picnic

ON THE WESTERN FRONT—(By Wireless)—What we gave you yesterday in trying to describe hedgerow fighting was the general pattern. If you were to come over here and pick out some hedge-enclosed field at random, the fighting there probably wouldn't be following the general pattern at all. For each one is a little separate war, fought under different circumstances.

For instance, you'll come to a woods instead of an open field. The Germans will be dug in all over the woods, in little groups, and it's really tough to get them out. Often in cases like that we will just go around the woods and keep going, and let later units take care of those surrounded and doomed fellows.

Or we'll go through the woods and clean it out, and another company coming through a couple of hours later, will find it full of Germans again. In a war like this one everything is in such confusion I don't see how either side ever gets anywhere.

Sometimes you don't know where the enemy is and don't know where your own troops are. As somebody said the other day, no battalion commander can give you the exact location of his various units five minutes after they have jumped off.

We will by-pass whole pockets of Germans, and they will be there fighting our following waves when our attacking companies are a couple of miles on beyond. Gradually the front gets all mixed up. There will be Germans behind you and at the side. They'll be shooting at you from behind and from your flank.

Sometimes a unit will get so far out ahead of those on either side that it has to swing around and fight to its rear. Sometimes we fire on our own troops, thinking we are in German territory. You can't see anything, and you can't even tell from the sounds, for each side uses some of the other's captured weapons.

CO-OPERATION

The tanks and infantry had to work in the closest co-operation in breaking through the German ring that tried to pin us down in the beachhead area. Neither could have done it alone.

The troops are of two minds about having tanks around them. If you're a foot soldier you hate to be near a tank, for it always draws fire. On the other hand, if the going gets tough you pray for a tank to come up and start blasting with its guns.

In our breakthrough each infantry unit had tanks attached to it. It was the tanks and the infantry that broke through that ring and punched a hole for the armored divisions to go through.

The armored divisions practically ran amuck, racing long distances and playing hob, once they got behind the German lines, but it was the infantry and their attached tanks that opened the gate for them.

Tanks shuttled back and forth, from one field to another, throughout our breakthrough battle, receiving their orders by radio. Bulldozers punched holes through the hedgerows for them, and then the tanks would come up and blast out the bad spots of the opposition.

UP FRONT WITH MAULDIN

on with the fighting. The relieved company may get to rest as much as a day or two. But in a big push such as the one that broke us out of the beachhead, a few hours is about all they can expect.

The company I was with got its orders to rest about 5 one afternoon. They dug foxholes along the hedgerows, or commandeered German ones already dug. Regardless of how tired you may be, you always dig in the first thing. Then they sent some men with cans looking for water. They got more K rations up by jeep, and sat on the ground eating them.

They hoped they would stay there all night, but they weren't counting on it too much. Shortly after supper a lieutenant came out of a farmhouse and told the sergeants to pass the word to be ready to move in 10 minutes. They hunched their packs and started just before dark.

Within half an hour they had run into a new fight that lasted all night. They had had less than four hours' rest in three solid days of fighting. That's the way life is in the infantry.

Recent Revolts Indicate Hitler Myth Exploding

It is clear that the main event in Germany was not the attempt on Hitler's life but the revolt of patriotic forces, chiefly in the army. The incident in Hitler's headquarters, if it happened, was only used to expose and liquidate this revolt. It is furthermore clear that Himmler's first attempt to head off and suppress this revolt by the killing of five German officers was unsuccessful. Otherwise it would not have been necessary to enlarge the purge and beyond the ranks of the army. It must be recalled that on July 20, Hitler said, "The mutiny, of a very few men, has been quelled."

The new purge and its trials will also not quell the mutiny. For it is not a conventional mutiny but a primeval explosion.

We are impeded in understanding clearly what is happening by the nonsense that has been put out by a chorus of publicists, many of them, I regret to say, in the Writers' War Board.

They have concocted a mythical picture of the last war, this war, and even the next war. According to them, the general staff, which conducted the last war, retired behind the facade of a collaborating German republic and for 20 years secretly planned this war. Hitler was merely a stooge and popular front of these conspirators, who, at the convenient moment, released this war on an unsuspecting world.

In due time, according to this myth, they would retire their willing stooge, put forward more acceptable persons, win an easy peace, and go underground to plot the next war.

WANT PEACE

Now what do we actually see? A group of generals and others are attempting to overthrow Hitler and get peace. They know the terms are "unconditional surrender." They know the war cannot be continued, after the overthrow. Unconditional surrender puts the whole future of Germany into the hands of the Allies. The generals prefer this to continuing with Hitler. But their "stooge" is not acting according to myth. He is murdering his chief staff officers, wildly and ruthlessly. And just how from their graves they are going to plot the next war is not clear.

The story is much simpler than plotters of detective stories want.

About Georgie Stone, Who Can't Afford Any More Sinus Operations

I know a fellow who holds the west coast record for the number of sinus operations. I mean operations he has undergone.

The number is 19. There may have been a couple others he does not recall, but 19 is official. Did they cure him?

No indeed, he still has sinus trouble. He has shook off the operation habit, however, now he lives in the desert most of the time around Palm Springs. He says he finds relief there.

My sinus man is Georgie Stone. He is a movie actor. If you are an old time movie fan you will remember him the minute I name one of his roles. He was Sol Levy in "Cimarron," one of the outstanding performances of the cinema times.

The picture was made at RKO. Georgie Stone has never worked on that lot since. No reason. Just a happenstance characteristic of Hollywood, they tell me. Who tells me? Actors tell me. But even more odd is the fact that although he is an excellent actor and as nice and amiable a little chap as you would care to meet, Georgie has not had a job in eight months, unless he is called for work before this meets your eye. That is also Hollywood, they tell me.

SONG AND DANCE MAN

Georgie used to work for the Shuberts in New York as a song and dance man. He was in "Artists and Models." I don't think he has ever sang or danced in Hollywood. He came to this country from a town in Poland named Lodze when he was a kid. There has been lots of fighting around Lodze in this war. Georgie's right name is Lichtenstein. He is 39 years old.

He is a little chap, weighing normally 110 pounds. He is underweight now so he is about 10 pounds lighter than a straw hat. He is getting bald. He has always been a great dude. Came to Hollywood some 19 years ago and his first picture role was the sewer rat in "Seventh Heaven."

I remember the opening night of "Seventh Heaven" as a stage play, and what a play it was, ladies and gentlemen! Helen Menken and a boy named George Gaul had the leading roles and they made theatrical history. I believe Gaul has been dead many years. He was a fine little actor.

Fox made "Seventh Heaven" as a movie in the silent days with and Japan. In 1937 Hitler freed all German institutions from Versailles provisions and forbade any German to accept the Nobel Peace prize. In spring 1938 Hitler marched into Austria. In September he occupied the Sudetenland. In March, 1939, he occupied Prague.

All these things were in the newspapers, and people like myself who said that Hitler was already making war were called "hysterics," "emotionalists" and "war-mongers."

But if this was an underground plot, I can't read or write.

And if the Nazis and German generals are planning a repetition of this "secret underground plot" for the third World War, one can only hope that the world will not again be feeble-minded.

Hitler and his gang of murderers have been from the beginning enemies of the human race, and thus of all countries, including their own. But every country has awakened to this fact only when destruction threatened it. Germany is the last to awaken, but it is awakening. And the same forces and people are rising to smite him there as arose everywhere—patriots, and honest and civilized men.

Late, but better late, like the rest of us, than never.

Super-Gas for B-29's Awaits Military Signal

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(P)—A supergasoline powerful enough to enable the giant B-29 and B-32 bombers to perform at their maximum capabilities in raiding Japan has been developed by American chemists and will go into production when the military gives the command.

General Lemay Gets B-29 Post

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(P)—Maj. Gen. Curtis E. Lemay is the new chief of the 20th Bomber Command, operators of the fleet of Superfortresses, the War Department announced today.

Lemay, 37 years old, a native of Columbus, Ohio, succeeds Brig. Gen. Kenneth B. Wolfe, who recently was appointed commanding general of the Air Forces Materiel Section at Wright Field, Ohio.

Until recently Lemay was commanding general of the heavy bombardment division of the 8th Air Force in England, in which post he personally led several big-scale attacks on German airplane industrial targets and U-boat installations.

As chief of the 20th Command, his new theater will be the China-Burma-India area, from which strategic attacks are being launched on Japanese war economy.

Polk Draft Board Approves Deferments

ROCKMART, Ga., Aug. 13.—The Polk County Selective Service Board has approved a six-week release for work in industrial plants for farm workers with family dependents, it is announced.

The action was taken at the request of a number of plant representatives and farmers, who, with crops laid by, wish to earn extra money during the latter weeks of summer. The board restricted such releases to married men or men with dependents without other support.

Prompt action is necessary in replying to the attractive offers in the Want Ad pages of The Constitution.

target—found by its flashes as seen by our spotters aloft—and ended our agony of inaction with mighty salvos from the main batteries.

SHELLS FELL EVERYWHERE

German shells roared over us, fell short of us, dead ahead, dead aft, along the water line. The mighty old "Tex" sped up, slowed, swerved in obedience to her calculating captain.

Sixty-five times, her officers counted, the Germans straddled or near-missed the Texas, hurling back her defiance over the intermittent smoke screen of the destroyers and sweeps.

On the navigation bridge, the tension was lightened by innumerable smokes, repeated jokes about unsteady hands. As calm as the busy captain were the navigator, Lt. Cmdr. Louis P. Spear, USN, 27, of Berkeley, Calif., and the communications officer, Lt. Forrest S. Drummond, USNR, 33, of New York City, ex-associate professor at the University of Chicago law school.

At his usual station portside was the chaplain, youth Lt. Clarence LeGrand Moody, USNR, 30, of Dillon, S. C., and New York City, the ship's broadcaster, doing a masterfully restrained job of describing, play-by-play, every phase of the action.

WHEN THE SHELL STRUCK

I moved slightly toward the starboard door. Then the shell struck.

The noise and the blast were indescribable, then there was a warm, choking yellow-black smoke everywhere. The back of my left knee felt as if a mule had kicked it inward, while a cyclone blew me forward.

I stumbled, half blinded, dazed and choking, out on to the open bridge, with several others.

The captain had turned about from the starboard rail, was looking in the bridge. "Clear the bridge . . . all hands below!"

Lt. Com. Spear, inside still, repeated it, adding: "Take it slow."

The captain a moment before had given the order to the helmsman, "Right, hard rudder!" Now he had to get to the conning tower, immediately change his previous order to "Steady as you go" and thereby avert a possible collision with the Arkansas or other ships.

LIKE DAILY HABIT

This he did, as if the whole performance were a daily habit.

Inside the bridge, with the smoke clearing, Lt. Com. Spear and Chaplain Moody, aided by Ship's Clerk Clark and several yeomen, administered morphine to the wounded . . . all struck down within a few feet of the helmsman, Christen N. Christensen, quartermaster, third class, U. S. N. R., 24, of Brooklyn, N. Y., against whom most of the blast and the fragments flew . . .

stanching their cuts until stretcher-bearers and medical company arrived. Among their aides were Will J. Eddleman, bugle master, first class, U. S. N. R., 22, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and the captain's Marine orderly, Pfc. William R. Buckhout, of Irvington, N. J.

Elsewhere on the ship there were other wounded. But the Texas' traditional luck was still with her. Despite the virtual perfection of the German shooting, there were no more direct hits. Despite that miracle-hit at the base of the bridge the damage, though extensive, was superficial; the casualties incredibly low, compared with what it might have been.

The Texas was still fighting, blasting away now with terrific eight-gun salvos. I watched the remainder of the battle from the conning tower, whence, before I arrived, I saw two corpsmen supporting the gunnery officers, Lt. Cmdr. Richard Derickson, U. S. N., 34, of Minnisk, Pa., and Seattle, Wash., and taking him below. There was a gasp in his head. We had been inside the 14-inch armor of the conning tower. The German shell had sheared off the main battery fire director hanging just over Lt. Cmdr. Derickson's head. By a miracle the huge weight only grazed Lt. Cmdr. Derickson. His condition, the doctors say, is good.

The fleet was taking punishment. Other ships were hit. Adm. Devo decided to "double the dose"—the bombardment lasted three hours instead of the originally planned 90 minutes, until the Army called it off at 3 o'clock.

We headed for our port in Britain, battered and shaken, but full of a thankful spirit.

sioner of Cliffside, said the flames had leveled about 75 per cent of the buildings and gutted another 10 per cent in the 49-acre enclosure.

Michaelson was injured and a fall from the roof of a one-story building from which he was directing the fire fighting.

Community officials who drove to the scene from neighboring towns, led by Mayor Joseph W. Marini, of Cliffside Park, personally manned fire hoses and aided firemen, seven of whom were overcome by smoke.

Among the individual tales of heroism was one of Marguerite Bailey, 30, registered nurse of Edgewater, N. J., who heaved the radio to the scene and saved or treated 75 persons single-handed for burns, smoke or heat exhaustion.

According to eyewitness accounts, the fire started when flames burst suddenly from under the Virginia Reel, a circular ride which was loaded with children.

Thomas Mensorio, of Cliffside Park, who was waiting his turn to enter, said "it was awful. It suddenly burned into a mass of flames while I watched."

At the swimming pool next to the Virginia Reel, 4,000 persons were caught on the beach and a jam was created at the entrance to a narrow bridge leading to the dressing rooms.

U. S. B-29's May Help To Keep World Peace

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(P)—Sir Alexander Cadogan, British delegate to the world security talks opening next week, virtually endorsed today the broad outlines for an international peace organization already laid down by President Roosevelt as the basis for the American security plan.

That statement, coupled with his disclosure that there already has been an exchange of ideas among the British, Americans and Russians on how peace should be organized, gave rise to hope among officials here for a greater degree of success than had been predicted heretofore for the Washington conversations.

Cadogan talked to reporters at a news conference held by the British ambassador, the Earl of Halifax, who has just returned from London.

Cadogan disclosed that the Soviet government has supplied a statement of at least some of its postwar organization ideas in the last day or so. He said Britain sent over a statement of its tentative plans more than a month ago. Both Britain and the United States also had kept Moscow advised.

The peace police proposal, it was learned meanwhile, was developed by military authorities and is growing in importance in American plans for the security conferences.

Essentially, the proposal is that each nation should earmark a part of its land, sea and air power as its own peace police organization. Each organization would retain its separate national identity. An important part of such a U. S. organization might be the world-roving 20th Air Force of super-bombers.

In event of a threat to peace which the world organization could not stop by political and

RENNES, France, Aug. 10.—(Delayed)—(P)—The Rennes air-drome, captured by the Americans, covers more acres than LaGuardia Field in New York and is one of the largest and best equipped fields the Germans had in France.

Originally laid out by the British in 1939, the field had 18 large hangars, and two new concrete runways, one 4,360 feet long and the other slightly over 5,000 feet, which the Germans had built.

Both runways were 250 feet wide with elaborate systems of taxiways and parking areas extending two and a half miles into the cover of woods.

Mustard Heads GI's Want List

The one thing Joe E. Mundy, serving with the infantry in Italy, wants most is a small glass of mustard, he said in writing the request to his father, J. Ellis Mundy, assistant district attorney.

"I've lost the comb you sent which arrived today and I'd like to have another, but please send the jar of mustard," he said.

Mundy said his son was in a rest camp somewhere in Italy after having participated in the North African campaign and in the push from Salerno to Rome.

He wrote his father that the grapes there are ripening now, but the olives are still the size of cherries.

Recently in action, young Mundy lost all his possessions, which he didn't mind so much had they not included the large rock collection he had picked up from Africa to Rome.

A former student at the University of Georgia, Mundy was vitally interested in the study of rocks and had quite a collection to exhibit before entering the Army.

CLASSMATES JOIN TO BOMB TARGET

NINTH AIR FORCE ADVANCE HEADQUARTERS, France, Aug. 10.—(Delayed) (AP)—An Air Force intelligence officer needed information on vital German installations, so he sent for a prisoner who reportedly had worked there.

When the prisoner walked into the tent, there was a stunned silence. After a terse exchange of greetings the German sat down and talked.

Later an official report stated simply that the target was bombed—it did not mention that the German prisoner and the air intelligence officer were classmates at a well-known university in the United States.

Textile Experts Named to WPB

Four textile experts have been appointed to the staff of the southeastern regional War Production Board to assist mills in this region in solving technical problems which may be slowing down production.

G. Leonard Allen, deputy WPB director, said the new field men are assigned to work in Georgia, Tennessee, North and South Carolina. Other men will be assigned to the Alabama and Charlotte, N. C., areas later, he said.

The new appointees include J. C. Edwards, formerly general superintendent of Martha Mills, of Thomaston; J. T. Hilton, former professor of textile engineering, North Carolina State College, of Raleigh; J. E. Barbe, on leave of absence from a southern textile corporation, assigned to Knoxville, and L. O. Bunton, former mill manager, assigned to Greenville, South Carolina.

Allen disclosed that WPB has ordered 1,700 looms to be converted from work on upholstery, drapery, satens, bedspread fabrics, etc., to production of urgently needed duck, tent twills, jungle cloth and duck substitutes by September 1.

GREENVILLE, Ga., Aug. 13.—Col. J. P. Atkinson was called to Greenville, Miss., this week due to the sudden death of his step-father, C. I. Brown. Mr. Atkinson's mother died about three months ago.

DATES ANNOUNCED FOR MAILING OVERSEA CHRISTMAS PACKAGES

The Christmas mail period for packages to Army and Navy personnel overseas is from September 15 to October 15, after which no gift parcel may be mailed to a soldier without the presentation of a written request from him, Postmaster Lon Livingston has announced.

Gifts for men and women overseas should be wrapped adequately to stand the long voyage and perhaps many forwarding trips, he said.

"Don't use a shoebox for the package," Livingston pleaded, "but pack gifts in boxes made of metal, wood, solid fiber-board or a strong double-faced corrugated board reinforced with strong gummed paper tape or tied with strong twine."

"If the outer wrapper is crushed—and this is likely to happen, the loss of contents can be prevented if fiberboard boxes are wrapped in heavy paper," he added.

He urged that as many persons as possible mail gifts on the first day of the mailing period in order to prevent a concentration or overloading of packages on the final days that may hinder their reaching the destination on time.

New Recipes Contributed by Readers Include Two Famous Greek Dishes

By Sally Saver.

There are days when writing a food column is more fun than work. These are the days when friends of the column drop in bringing a favorite recipe to share in neighborly fashion with me, or to discuss some bright and shining new idea which has occurred to them. All good cooks like to collect recipes, but they also like to share and exchange ideas and culinary experiences. Sometimes those who have small children or who live too far call or send recipes or ideas in. These expressions of neighborly interest and willingness to share always please me very much.

It was in this spirit that Mrs. James Andreolas, 465 Techwood drive, N. W., Atlanta, whose father and husband were born in Greece, came in recently bringing recipes for several famous Greek dishes she serves. These she thought I might like, and I did. Furthermore, I think they are too good to keep to myself, so I am printing a couple.

Another day I had a recipe for watermelon rind pickle from Mrs. L. J. Halpin, of Pine Circle, N. E., Atlanta. This recipe, Mrs. Halpin says, was given her by the wife of the present governor of Iowa, Mrs. Bourke Hickenlooper, who is renowned in that section for her good cooking. Mrs. Halpin thought southern women might like to know how Iowans make watermelon pickle.

But first, Mrs. Andreolas' roast lamb, Greek style:

A leg of lamb or whole shoulder. Wash with warm water, a little soda added to the water takes away strong flavor. Wipe meat dry. With a small sharp knife make small slits and stuff these with: 1 onion, 1 or 2 cloves, garlic, chopped, salt and pepper and 1 teaspoon thyme. Sprinkle meat all over with salt and pepper and roast in 350-degree oven without cover and without adding water, allowing 30 minutes to a pound.

When meat is half done baste with the juice of 2 lemons. And 40 minutes before cooking time is up place peeled potatoes around roast. This dish of roast lamb and potatoes Mrs. Andreolas serves with a salad bowl of greens, tomatoes and cucumbers dressed with olive oil, vinegar, salt and pepper.

Cottage cheese makes a large variety of light but nutritious summer salads, combining well with fruits and vegetables.

The Greek "Dolmatis" or "wrapped cabbage balls" is justly famous. This is the recipe:

1 pound ground lean pork.
Salt and pepper.
One large onion and 1 clove garlic, ground fine.

1 cup rice, washed, but uncooked.
Large cabbage leaves.
1 teaspoon thyme.
1 teaspoon cinnamon.
1 bay leaf.

Place large cabbage leaves in saucepan and add hot water to cover. Place cover over fire for a few minutes for leaves to wilt. Lift out leaves, drain, saving water. Mix the ground meat, rice, onion and seasonings. Form into balls and place a ball in each cabbage leaf; roll up. Place in large saucepan and add enough to the cabbage liquid to barely cover. Cook gently about 30 minutes. These are served with lemon-egg sauce made this way: Beat 2 eggs well; gradually add the juice of 2 lemons, beating all the while. Finally add $\frac{1}{2}$ cup of the cabbage liquid, gradually. Mrs. Andreolas says she stuffs bell peppers and squash in the same way.

Now, here's the recipe from our neighbor in Iowa sent in by Mrs. Halpin:

WATERMELON PICKLES

Kind of 1 large watermelon.
(4 quarts prepared rind.)

Cut all pink from rind and cut into small squares, about 1 inch. Soak overnight in salt water. $\frac{1}{2}$ cup salt to 1 gallon of water. Next morning rinse well, changing water several times. Then boil in water to cover 1½ hours. Drain and add 2 quarts vinegar, 4 cups sugar, 2 tablespoons whole cloves (tied in a bag), 2 sticks of cinnamon. Boil syrup 30 minutes, then add rind and one small bottle of Maraschino cherries. Boil 45 minutes. Then let stand overnight. Reheat and seal in sterilized jars. (Editor's Note: In these days of sugar-saving I know you could get by with 10 or 12 cups of sugar in the above recipe. But don't tell the governor's wife I said you could alter her prized recipe!)

Worry Clinic

By Dr. George W. Crane.

(Annette has quit three churches because she says she found hypocrites therein. And she now is depriving her youngsters of Sunday school training because of her fallacy in logic. It is a sin to let your adult prejudices interfere with the proper growth and nurture of your child's idealism.)

CASE D-225: Annette B., aged 34, is the mother of two little boys. "I have read your column for several years and usually agree with your advice, Dr. Crane," she announced at the opening of our interview.

"But you have constantly urged parents to send their children to Sunday school."

"I disagree with that, for I have seen too many hypocrites in the church."

"Two or three times after we began reading your column, my husband and I started to attend one or another church, but we never went very long for we always found hypocrites there."

"So why do you insist that children be brought up in the Sunday school?"

DIAGNOSIS: Annette's attitude is very juvenile and I can prove that statement. When a youngster goes to kindergarten or first grade, his teacher stands for the whole field of education.

If she wears a sourpuss face or is caustic and sharp-tongued, then the child may dislike the entire idea of formal education. He thus tells his mother he hates school and may later try to play hooky.

What he dislikes is not the school, but the principal exponent of the school system, namely, his teacher who is synonymous thereof.

We can excuse the child's identification of his teacher with the field of pedagogy, for he has a mental age of only 5 or 6 years when he enters grammar school.

KINDERGARTEN PARENTS: But when a grown man or woman indulges in this juvenile fallacy of damning a church because he finds somebody in the congregation whom he dislikes, or whom he considers to be a hypocrite, then we cannot condone such illogic.

There are hypocrites in every church, and even among the clergy. But religion contains fundamental truths in the field of ethics, just as mathematics includes similar truths in that realm.

Wouldn't Annette be considered foolish if she refused to use the multiplication tables because some arithmetic teacher made a few mistakes in using mathematics?

A personal error by a professor does not invalidate the science which he is paid to teach. Annette and similar adults must learn to be logical.

Nor does a mistake by a clergyman or parson invalidate the basic merit in the Golden Rule of the Good Samaritan policy.

The Sunday schools are conducted by men and women who generally donate their time to help encourage idealism and unselfishness in your youngsters.

Those teachers may arise on sub-zero, blizzardy mornings and when most of us prefer to lie abed. They study and plan the lessons for the benefit of your youngsters.

Even if there are hypocrites in the church, your children are not likely to meet them in the Sunday schools, and probably would not recognize the hypocrisy if they did encounter it, so quit hampering the growth of practical idealism in your youth, simply because you cherish a few illogical grudges against the hypocrites.

It is high time the 50 per cent of non-churchgoing Americans began to recognize that the church is the only regular source of moral instruction for American youth.

If you think it is imperfect, then get out of bed on wintry mornings, teach a class and show how to do it better.

Little Margaret O'Brien Stars in Two New Movies

By Ling Arvad.

HOLLYWOOD.—(NANA)—Little Margaret O'Brien is certainly getting the top-star treatment over at M-G-M. She is scheduled to play in a great number of pictures, including "Touch of Heaven," a lovely story about a little girl who goes to heaven. There she tells the Powers-That-Be that she has something very important to settle in her family before she is able to stay up there. She is permitted to go back to earth, and proves that she can do such an excellent job of making her people happy, that the Powers in heaven decide to let her stay on earth a little longer.

But the most interesting story, of which I read a part a few days ago, is "Vines Have Tender Grapes." Director Clarence Brown was so enthused with George Victor Martin's book, that he persuaded M-G-M to buy it and now Margaret will play Selma, the wise, lovely little girl of Norwegian ancestry living in north-central Wisconsin, locale of the story.

Damon Runyon, one of America's most noted writers of short stories, is high on the list of beloved people in this town. This was shown by his warm welcome back to Hollywood after his recent illness. The best proof that he is himself again is that he has signed a new 20th Century-Fox contract as a writer-producer. Besides that Runyon will give the once-over to "I'll Be Seeing You" for Columbia and work in close collaboration with his friend of 35 years, Al Jolson.

The longer the war lasts the more catch-phrases are pinned on our leading morale boosters. Marines on Eniwetok island in the South Pacific have conferred a new title on Songstress Frances Langford, currently singing for her GI supper in the South Pacific. Because she was the first woman to set foot on Eniwetok after the Marines had cleaned out the Japs, Frances was named "The First Lady of Eniwetok." Frances is already acting the part by turning out a South Pacific version of "My Day."

Last week Marie McDonald went up to Arrowhead for her first vacation in a year. Something went wrong with her brakes up there and a repair car, holding Marie's car to a slow pace with heavy chains, brought her safely down that mile-long mountain road. Marie's car preceded the repair man.

When they reached San Bernardino the garage man handed the actress an obviously exorbitant bill.

"That's a little high, isn't it?" Marie asked.

"Lady," said the garage man, "if you want I should like you to stay up there, you can coast back without brakes—for free."

Somewhat more than a year ago, Ralph Bellamy, after 13 years of being cast in some of the duller roles imaginable, decided to shake the dust of Hollywood from his shoes and make a try at Broadway. A spell of idleness ensued with seemingly nothing worth while in sight. Then one night a friend sent him a script of an unproduced play, "Tomorrow the World." After reading it, Bellamy called the producer and was given the leading part. "Tomorrow the World" went on to be a success on Broadway.

Now Ralph is back in Hollywood with a plum assignment as Dwight Proctor in "Quest in the House," a role far away ahead of anything he ever had in his "typed" days.

Sure—they always return, when they have a chance. We like to think it is because of the sunshine and not because of the huge stacks of greenbacks.

I am anxious to get it in weight to use as a personal error by a professor does not invalidate the science which he is paid to teach. Annette and similar adults must learn to be logical.

Avoid High Calorie Pitfall If You Want To Stay Slim

Solution to Your Floor Problems Is Mastipave, Says Blacknall

Has Amazing Resistance to Wear and Tear

If Kipling were alive today he would surely be inspired to do another version of his famous poem, "Boots," for not alone on "ard highway," but in mess halls, barracks, hospitals, dormitories, recreation centers, administration offices, warehouses, and all types of industrial institutions millions of American feet are "pounding up and down again," as our people go all out to win the war. What would be a safe, durable low-cost floor covering for these millions of square feet of floor space?

Vol T. Blacknall, president of the Vol T. Blacknall Company, 119 Cain St., N. W., Atlanta, one of the largest distributors of floor covering in the southeast, had the answer. It was Pabco Mastipave. Long a distributor of Pabco floor coverings, manufactured by the Paraffine Companies, the Vol T. Blacknall Company was familiar with the 20-year peacetime record of Pabco Mastipave, with its low initial cost, the ease and speed of installation, plus its ability to withstand heavy foot traffic, and resist abrasion.

"I knew that Mastipave was the answer to the need for an all-purpose wartime floor covering," said Mr. Blacknall. "Barracks, cantonments, Army and Navy hospitals, ordnance warehouses, arsenals and other wartime projects may be built for the duration only; but uncovered wooden floors

Don't Take Chances With Slippery Floors

Slippery floors oftentimes bring not only injury to folks, but frequently cause damage suits. The best way to prevent accidents of this kind, as well as to give outstanding resistance to wear and tear of industrial and commercial traffic, is suggested by Vol T. Blacknall, of the big floor covering house bearing his name.

"Pabco Mastipave floor covering," says Mr. Blacknall, "can take a beating. Under the impact of heavy traffic, from hob-nailed shoes to iron wheeled trucks, PABCO MASTIPAVE remains 'alive' and 'new'. Dents, scratches and punctures heal themselves. . . . For long wear and complete satisfaction demand this resilient, cohesive floor covering."

Mr. Blacknall declares that over a period of 20 years the installation of millions of square feet of PABCO MASTIPAVE furnish convincing evidence of amazing durability.

that buckle, splinter, and allow infiltration of dust and cold air are not satisfactory.

"It has been found that a covering must be used on such floors and the excess wear they will receive necessitates using a material that can take it. That's why so many war agencies and contractors specify Pabco Mastipave."

Throughout the southeast Blacknall sales representatives are pointing out to their customers that too often so-called "tough" floor coverings become dry and start to splinter and crack. Not so Mastipave, state the Blacknall men. Over a period of 20 years Mastipave has built up an enviable record for remaining "new" and "alive" under constant wear. When Mastipave is dented, scraped or punctured it will heal itself in a short time under the impact of heavy traffic. This quality of cohesive resilience enables Pabco's Mastipave to take all sorts of abuse from loading trucks and scuffling feet alike. Mastipave is manufactured in 25-yard rolls, 36 inches wide, of factory cut 9 by 9-inch tiles, in colors of black or terracotta red.

It is easily and quickly installed by cold cementing over any surface . . . wood, concrete or metal, and requires no special under-floor preparation. Sheets of Mastipave can be scored in any design with a simple tool.

"The wartime institutions of the southland have not been slow to see the advantages of Mastipave."

"We take pride in announcing that the nationally advertised line of Saf-T-Wax (non-rubbing), Saf-T-Wax (paste), Saf-T-Wax cleaner and Wax-O-Lene furniture polish has appointed our company southern distributors. Complete stocks of all items, in all size containers, carried in Atlanta, and prompt service is assured to all of our dealer customers.

"Saf-T-Wax (non-rubbing and paste) will enable you to maintain your Mastipave and other type hard surface floors more efficiently and economically than any other products that we know of."

New Addition To Williams Printing Co.

The recent announcement of a new addition to the plant of the Williams Printing Company located at 78 Marietta street is another sign of further progress and healthy growth of this leading Atlanta printing concern.

Its growth has been rapid and constant. But, understandably so, for it is the abiding policy of this business, with which every employee is imbued, to produce the finest possible job at the lowest possible cost. Those who deal with the Williams Printing Company for the first time quickly recognize an attitude of genuine helpfulness and understanding. Their large plant in the Rhodes building on Marietta street and the many modern high speed automatic machines inspire a further confidence that the printing job entrusted to them will be produced in the best possible manner and at the lowest possible cost.

Every job is handled in the same painstaking manner and none seems too large nor any too small. They are equipped to print practically every type of office form and the finest advertising color printing. In addition to the letterpress departments they have a complete up-to-the-minute photographic department. Through the Williams Printing Company is able to save their customers much time and expense in producing fine color work without the use of expensive halftones or line plates.

Although it is a generally accepted theory in business that it is well to "cut corners" in the matter of expense, but only when those cuts do not have a detrimental influence upon the prestige and reputation of the business. Therefore, in the matter of printing of every kind the safest plan is to delegate your job to a printer who has a reputation for quality work at reasonable prices. This will assure you of getting your printing work done correctly and befitting the high character of your business.

You can always rely upon the Williams Printing Company to produce the kind of printing that impresses with its professional appearance, and will carry your message with the same degree of dignity as you would expect of your salesmen. Give Williams an opportunity to prove this to you as they have to hundreds of business concerns, churches and other organizations. Visit their plant at 78 Marietta street or call them at WALnut 6592.

Visit Lakewood Airport, There Learn To Fly

There is every indication—practically every assurance—that aviation is certain to occupy a very important spot in postwar development.

For this reason many Atlantans are taking advantage of the expert flying instruction offered at the Lakewood airport to enable them to pilot an airplane.

The fields has been operated for the past two years by Jack D. Selman, who has made several improvements in its facilities. Maintaining eight planes, Cubs, Taylorcrafts and Aeronacs, the Lakewood Airport employs a staff of certified flying instructors. "At least eight hours of dual instruction are required before a person can solo," said Mr. Selman. "These hours of instruction may be arranged to suit the convenience of the pupil, and they are paid for at moderate rates as each lesson is given."

"Aviation is sure to be expanded after the war," Mr. Selman

New Furnaces Now Available

36 Months To Pay for Same If You Prefer

The Moncrief Furnace Company has serviced thousands and replaced hundreds of furnaces in the Atlanta area since our entry into the war. Priority regulations have never restricted the replacement of worn or burned-out furnaces with new equipment nor has the manufacture of vital repair parts been seriously curtailed.

Government officials have gone a step further by officially urging everyone to purchase their next winter's fuel requirements now... and to have their present heating facilities checked for necessary repairs or replacements.

Moncrief expert servicemen are responding by offering a free inspection of your present coal furnace in order to determine its exact condition. If conditions are such that your furnace cannot last another season or that your present facilities are inadequate to satisfactorily heat your home next winter, it will be a simple matter to obtain a new modern, efficiently operating Moncrief furnace. You are not obliged to make an initial payment until November 1, and then, you may take as many as 36 months to pay, if you prefer.

The Moncrief Furnace Company, with offices and plant at 675 Hemphill avenue, N. W., is Atlanta's oldest and most reliable manufacturer and distributor of home heating equipment. Moncrief maintains a completely equipped service department, along with a large stock of new furnaces and replacement parts. Their telephone number is Hemlock 1281.

The Napsonian School Opens September 5

The Napsonian school, 341 Ponce de Leon avenue, N. E., will open for senior high students on September 5 and for kindergarten and elementary and junior high students on September 12. All students, except kindergarten, are expected to come to the school from 9-12 a. m. some time during the week preceding the opening of school to take care of business matters, to buy books, to bring in report card from last year, and to be definitely classified.

Mrs. A. Oliver Bland Jr., of Atlanta, will have charge of the kindergarten. Mrs. Bland is an experienced and well trained teacher, who has taught in public schools and in private. Besides the regular kindergarten work she will have an orchestra for the children and teach dancing and expression.

Mrs. Sidney Anderson, of Bristol, Va., graduate of Radford State Teachers' College, Radford, Va., will teach history in the high school. Mrs. Anderson has taught for several years in the high schools of Virginia.

All applications should be in promptly as some classes are already filled. All students, alumnae and friends are invited to come to the school at 8 and 8:30 p. m. on August 25 to see colored movies of commencement and the kindergarten Tom Thumb wedding.

MACONITE RECALLS 5-SECOND MISSION

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Aug. 13.—(P)—Capt. Thomas P. Blake, of Macon, Ga., flew 325 combat and operational missions in the Southwest Pacific—there's one in particular he'll never forget.

"It was probably the shortest mission on record—if five seconds in the air could be considered a 'mission,'" he asserted at the AAF redistribution station here.

"Taking off from a tiny airstrip in Nadzab, New Guinea, last November, we were jumped by a pack of Zeros exactly five seconds after leaving the runway," he recalled. "Lucky for us, our ack-ack guns immediately started to pepper them, and the Zeros wheeled crazily, dodging each other by inches."

"It gave us just enough time to set the plane down on another tiny airstrip," he added.

The Georgia pilot wears the DFC and the Air Medal with one cluster.

OPA To Raise Yarns Ceilings

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(P)—Moving to meet requirements of the stabilization extension act, the Office of Price Administration tonight announced "interim" increases it will put into effect soon in the mill ceiling prices of cotton materials used for such end products as underwear, men's and children's socks, upholstery and draperies.

Further study will be required, OPA said, to determine whether an increase in retail prices for such items will be necessary. The new mill price schedule provides an increase of approximately 10 to 15 per cent in the ceilings on combed cotton yarns and a boost of about 7 to 12 per cent in prices for carded cotton yarns. It also allows a hike of 2 to 2.5 cents a pound in ceiling prices for cotton Class A print cloth "in the grey," as well as for certain other print cloth yarn fabrics.

The agency said that when the new prices are officially issued, the interim ceilings for yarns and Class A print cloth will be retroactive to June 30, the effective date of the price control extension act.

Little Idleness Seen by George

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(P)—Substitution of a "states' rights" bill for legislation to set up federal standards of postwar unemployment compensation was attributed by Sen. Hatch, Democrat, New Mexico, today to "Republican control" of the senate.

Rejecting all attempts to compromise, a Republican-southern Democratic coalition Friday passed a reversion bill sponsored by Sen. George, Democrat, Georgia, after voting down, 49 to 25, the Kilgore-Murray measure under which jobless payments would be set by congress.

George told newsmen no compromise was possible on the basis of the labor-supported Murray-Kilgore bill because "it would upset veterans' administration jurisdiction over returning soldiers and upset state unemployment systems upon whose experience we must rely."

"There is little basis for apprehension that there will be immediate widespread unemployment if we move promptly for reconversion," George said.

Chairman Reynolds, Democrat, North Carolina, of the senate military committee, threatened meanwhile to seek an amendment of the price control (OPA) law unless government agencies move to provide price ceiling adjustments for industries as soon as they resume civilian production.

"All studies of the reconversion problem convince me that there is too much of a tendency to slip service to increased production, and at the same time actually retard it by tight profit and price controls," he said in a statement.

Hearings before his committee on the recently passed demobilization legislation, Reynolds asserted, convinced him that the War Production Board and the Office of Price Administration should give private industry assurance the government "intends to stimulate production as soon as war trends will permit."

Polish Factions At Odds Again

MOSCOW, Aug. 13.—(P)—Soviet resentment over reports the Red army had abandoned Warsaw's underground army to its fate raised fresh obstacles today for an agreement on Polish unity between the government-in-exile and the Russian-backed National Committee of Liberation.

The dispute, through the official news agency Tass, disclaimed all responsibility for the premature insurrection in Warsaw, where Gen. Bor's patriot troops are ringed by German forces, while the Red army hammers at the suburbs.

"Attempts to notify and coordinate any events in Warsaw with the Soviet command were ever made by Polish emigrant circles," Tass asserted. "The responsibility for things happening in Warsaw rests entirely upon Polish emigrant circles in London."

All Moscow newspapers printed a London dispatch quoting Daily Worker charges that Gen. Kazimierz Sosnkowski, commander-in-chief of the exile Polish army, after visiting Rome in an attempt to carry on anti-Soviet intrigues in the Vatican, ordered the Warsaw uprising to match credit for the capital's liberation from the Red army and its Polish corps.

This account declared that the Warsaw population was misled into thinking Sosnkowski's agents were in close touch with Red forces at the eastern gates, and as a result the patriots suffered heavy losses.

Meanwhile, the National Committee of Liberation is firmly organizing civil administration, police and political life in liberated Polish territory with the backing of the Red army.

OPA Will Issue Ruling On Civilian Goods Prices

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(P)—The War Production Board's long-awaited order permitting limited increase in civilian goods manufacture, due to be issued tomorrow and effective Tuesday, will be followed shortly by an OPA ruling on prices.

Manufacturers probably will be required to apply for an individual ceiling on each item they are permitted to make, price officials said, with the ceilings to be determined mainly by the costs of production.

Since only a comparative handful of firms is expected to qualify for civilian goods production in the next few months because of strict curbs on non-essential use of manpower, OPA sources said, little attempt will be made to set industry-wide ceilings or pricing formulas.

In most cases the ceilings will be set by OPA field offices rather than by headquarters in Washington.

This will speed the process, OPA sources said, and give field officials training for the flood of pricing activity expected when large-scale reconversion begins.

1,000,000 U. S. Troops In Pacific War Theater

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—(P)—President Roosevelt's announcement that more than 1,000,000 troops are overseas in the Pacific war theater indicates that about 2,000,000 Army men are deployed on other fronts, presumably a large proportion of them in the European area.

Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of Army Service Forces, said recently that 4,000,000 Army troops are deployed overseas.

The President disclosed the total for the Pacific area in his address last night from the Puget Sound Navy Yard after his return from Hawaii.

His use of the term "troops" did not make clear whether that referred to Army forces or included Marines. The Marine Corps now is composed of about 460,000 men.

Two Georgians Wed British Girls, Add Bit for Postwar Harmony

TWO BRITISH BRIDES—and their Tucker (Ga.) husbands. From left to right are S. Sgt. Luther Arnold Jr. and Mrs. Arnold, the former Miss Kathleen Bradshaw, of London; and Boatswain's Mate R. E. Orr and Mrs. Orr, the former Miss Frances Bouzaid, of Epsom, N. Z.

2 Georgians Wed British Girls, Add Bit for Postwar Harmony

By TINA RANSOM
Two Tucker, Ga., boys have done their bit toward postwar world unity—by the simple expedient of marriage!

To the United States in general; to their respective families in particular, Sgt. Luther Arnold Jr. and Boatswain's Mate R. E. Orr contributed, in the first case, the former Miss Kathleen Bradshaw, of Deptford, London, England, and, in the second case, the former Miss Frances Bouzaid, of Epsom, New Zealand.

A contribution that is not to be measured at.

It is no wonder, then, that the Arnolds and the Orrs are greatly astir these days over the "foreign" addition to their families, and are awaiting with impatience the day when the two British lassies will arrive in this country.

Both families are ready and eager to be "bowled over" by the charms that so effectively blitzed Sgt. Arnold and Boatswain's Mate Orr. After the first surprise had worn off, the mothers-in-law say, the prospect has grown steadily more pleasing and exciting, and they now feel as if they had known their new daughters for years.

ANNOUNCED ENGAGEMENT

"I didn't think it was possible to love somebody I have never seen," confessed Mrs. Arnold Sr., "but Kathleen's letters are so sweet and gay that I do, already."

This is the way that Sgt. Arnold, in a letter to his mother, announced his engagement to Kathleen.

"Well, I found the girl I have always wanted, even if I did have to go all the way to England to get her!"

Of course, the marriage itself was not so simple as all that.

Truck Drivers To Take Road

By The Associated Press.
Approximately 25,000 drivers in eight midwestern states are ready to start over-the-road trucks rolling again today, according to word which came from a closed meeting yesterday in Minneapolis, Minn., of 103 operators of trucks seized by the government Saturday.

After the day-long meeting Lou Hoskins, executive secretary of the Midwest Operators Association, last night informed Ellis T. Longnecker, ODT federal manager of the seized lines, that members had voted unanimously to resume operations today under government control.

Longnecker said 28 independent operators, who attended yesterday's meeting, would not be affected by the Midwest Association's decision.

Longnecker said the truckers, who walked out more than a week ago when employers refused to pay a seven-cent-an-hour wage increase ordered by the WLB, would receive the increase under government operation.

Sidney Brennan, secretary-treasurer of Drivers' Local 544, and Gordon Conklin, president of Local 120, representing the Twin City area, said their men would go back to work today, but that the independent operators would have to sign up for the wage increase "before our men take their trucks out."

In Detroit two major labor disputes involving 7,000 striking General Motors Chevrolet gear and axle workers and 3,300 employees of the Briggs Manufacturing Company were reported settled over the week-end.

At the Duraloy plant, Scottsdale, Pa., Phillips Garman, assistant disputes director of the WLB, said 300 members of the United Steel Workers Union (CIO) had agreed to call a meeting to end the work stoppage, which began Aug. 4, today.

A work halting by 950 employees of the Worth Steel Company, Claymont, Del., also was expected by company officials to end today.

Twenty-nine other labor disputes involving about 19,000 workers still were unsettled.

He Should Know Von Paulus Says Hitler Has Lost War

LONDON, Aug. 13.—(P)—Field Marshal Gen. Friedrich von Paulus, Nazi commander who lost at Stalingrad, told the Germans in a statement broadcast by the Moscow radio today that "the war is lost through the fault of Hitler, and continuation by the Germans is senseless bloodshed."

"Germany," said Von Paulus, "must remove Hitler, set up a new government which will make peace and create conditions which will insure the continued existence of our people."

"Recent events have made continuation of the war by the Germans senseless bloodshed. The Red army already has reached the frontiers of East Prussia. In France the Anglo-American troops are through the German defenses and in terrain giving them wide operational freedom. Neither in the east nor west has Germany reserves capable of restoring the situation."

"For Germany the war is lost."

He warned the Germans that "the attitude of Hitler's representatives toward the population of occupied countries—which evokes the disgust of every real soldier and every sincere German—will impose upon us the most serious reproaches from all peoples of the world. If the German people don't reject such crimes they'll bear the full responsibility for everything."

SHIPWRECK TO MARRIAGE

Boatswain's Mate Orr, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Orr, met Frances under similar circumstances. He had been on the cruise ship "Atlantis" when it was sunk on November 13, 1942, and was among the survivors taken to New Zealand to convalesce from wounds received in the blasting and exposure that followed. Incidentally, he has just received the Purple Heart in recognition of this catastrophe.

Frances and he were married in August, 1943, and now have a son, aged three months, by the name of Francis Raymond Orr.

And so Tucker, Ga., is getting prepared. When victory is won, when the boys come marching home, when two passengers, one from Epsom, New Zealand, and one from London, England, have finally reached their destination; then there will be a celebration in this small Georgia town of extraordinary proportions.

Mrs. R. E. Orr, and Mrs. Luther Arnold Jr., you may be assured, beforehand, of a hearty and lasting welcome!

'IKE' INSTRUCTS FRENCH ON BOMBS

LONDON, Aug. 13.—(P)—Gen. Eisenhower told the French people behind the German lines today how to avoid Allied bombs and bullets aimed at the enemy.

The commander-in-chief's latest instructions, carried over the Algiers radio, said the Germans were using farm vehicles and moving troops on bicycles. It told the French not to cycle in groups and warned them to "take cover at the sight of Allied planes."

"Dig your protective trench far from routes of travel and as near home as you can," he said. "Keep an emergency supply of food at hand."

"The labels on the necks of your own children with their names, your name and your address. When you see liberating troops, stay under cover until you know the Allies have control and firing has ceased."

"The Germans have been shooting citizens who showed the tricolor too soon."

PEARS BEING CANNED

QUITMAN, Ga., Aug. 13.—The Associated Southern Planters canneries started operations here this week and between 500 and 750 bushels of pears are being handled each day.

Weighing Heavily Today With Employees
TO attract and hold the higher type of personnel, a well-planned program of Group Insurance can often more than outweigh the advantages that other concerns are offering, or at least balance the scales.
Making Group, Life, Accident, Sickness, Hospital and Surgical expenses, and even Retirement Income Insurance available to your employees may well repay many times its cost in increased efficiency, productivity and loyalty of personnel.

Save Paper

Save your waste paper. The blueprints for war industry, the maps, the orders, the casings for the bullets of invasion, food packages for soldiers—they all require paper.

For collection, simply separate your paper from other trash for collection by the city sanitary department in the downtown area, or, in the residential section, collect your papers and magazines and call one of the following numbers for a pickup truck:

JA. 2224 JA. 2627

GAS STAMP STOLEN

SPARTA, Ga., Aug. 13.—The Sinclair service station in this city, operated by Roy Andrews, was burglarized recently and 2,000 gallons of ration stamps were stolen. The stamps had been accepted from customers and were thought to be safely tucked away for safekeeping but the burglar found them. Nothing else in the station was molested, as far as Andrews could find and no trace has been found of the culprit. It appears that the ration stamps are more precious than money when stations in this section are burglarized.

AUNT HET

"The paper told how many new babies are deserted in New York. No other animal deserts its young, but no other is treated like an outcast for havin' one, either."
